Catholic High School For Boys

6300 Lee Avenue
Little Rock,
Arkansas

The big moment. By receiving their rings, Peter O'Connell and D.J. Scoigletti seal the commitment they have made to the school. The ring mass is the day seniors first realize the responsibility they must accept.

Nice try, anyway. Senior Bill Glenn, the ideal athletic supporter, showed his enthusiasm for the football team by making his car as colorful as possible.

Don't look down. Strutting their showy shorts during the brief dress code reprieve, Keith Massery, John Monroe, and Robbie Loket recount their adventures of the summer.

All Tied Up

What is high school? What is this place we call Catholic High? More than bricks and cement, more than a place of learning, even more than a group of students and adults united by a common goal, a certain spirit, amplified by each student and his contribution to the school, marks it as different. Truly understood only by those who experience it, this Catholic High spirit becomes a phase of life never forgotten.

A unique aura surrounds the school, a magnetic force emitted by all interactions between members of the school develops. A certain quality that makes it special — a gusto for success and fellowship — ties it together.

"I notice it in the pep rallies. Everybody's enthusiastic, and it's wild. It's completely different from the school I went to before, where students were taught to be seen and not heard," observed Steve Satterfield.

This would not be possible without the mysterious essence surrounding the school. Tommy Tanner perhaps best ties it all up with his personal interpretation of the unusual sentiments and feelings: "I have gone to this school for four years, and I still cannot quite explain the Catholic High spirit. All I know is that whenever I am with other students, I am proud to display what this place really stands for."

A unique aura surrounds the school, a magnetic force emitted by members of the school.

Vroooooommm! Senior Walker Lasiter reverts to childhood for a skit during a pep rally.

Take it off! Matt Hartnedy put on an unusual strip act during his election speech. The soon-to-be president wanted to show that underneath he was just like anyone else.

Toothing their horns. Mark Francis and Matt McAvoy show their spirit for the band through their dedicated efforts.

Strutting their stuff. The color guard prepares to present the colors before a football game. Cadets Peter Braunfisch, William Clark, Mark Koch, and Todd Hardberger maintain ROTC discipline.

Giving it their all. Pre-game pep rallies display vibrant school enthusiasm. Detliff Schneider, Jeff Gash, and Tommy Tanner were among these avid celebrators.

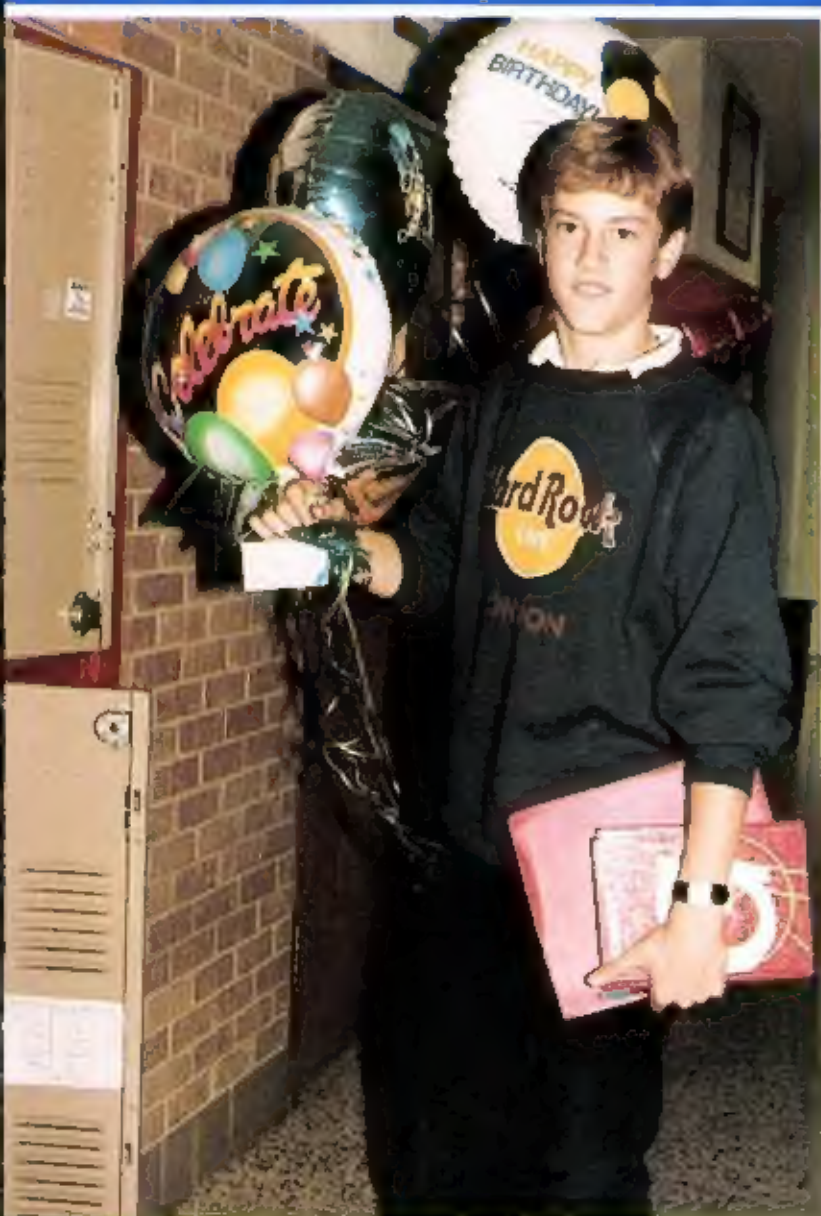

A moment of reverence. Mass in the chapel is a privilege enjoyed by seniors several times during the year. The beauty of the chapel makes the mass a special religious event for everyone.

The daily tradition. Jim Adams, the epitome of sophomorphism, waits till 8:29 to perform the daily routine of tie tying.

Party wagon. Shan Russell and associates man the rocket assault vehicle.

Thanks, Mom. Secret Admirer breaks school rule by sending sophomore Jerry Jones a balloon bouquet.

Blastoff! The "breakthrough" awaits the Rockets' burst of energy in the final seconds before kickoff. The game ended with Catholic swamping the Wampus Cats, 14 to 7.

Wisdom Of Walker

When I came as a freshman, I was unsure of myself. I had only lived in Little Rock for two months when the first day of school rolled around. I got an interview at Catholic High and was accepted. At the time it wasn't that big a deal.

As it got closer to the first day, I began to think that an all boys school, wearing ties, and short haircuts didn't sound like what I was looking for in a high school. My mother said that I could change if I didn't like it in nine weeks or so. Four years later, I am still here.

Since then, I have grown to love this school and for what it stands. I had my differences with Father Tribou my sophomore year, but then, who doesn't? My junior year was my year of change. I was elected to Boy's State and chosen as a cheerleader.

The most amazing aspect of the school is the spirit and sense of belonging. Father Tribou confronts the problems in the school as if we were one big family.

Every Friday that we have a football game there is a pep assembly. The cheerleaders, band, and the cheerleaders and Rockettes from Mt. St. Mary's perform. The feeling at a pep rally is unreal. When we play teams such as Hall or Northeast, the gym feels like it's going to explode with energy. Everybody is on their feet, and everybody is yelling. This is the spirit that makes Catholic what it is! A school that makes me proud to speak its name and wear its colors! — Walker Lasiter

ATTENTION GRABBERS

In Today, Out Tomorrow

In the halls of Catholic High, diverse personalities demand attention when strolling along in their one-of-a-kind outfits and hair-styles. Their "creations" represent all the latest trends.

Bright colors are a definitely noticeable trend these days. Plaid, paisley, and flower designs cover pants, shirts, ties, and just about anything else. Stovepipe pegged pants, a term applied to pants that narrow toward the bottom and end up practically glued to the legs, and baggie trousers with loose fitting shirts with rolled sleeves also appear daily. Tennis shoes of all kinds share in popularity, but the most noticeable are Air Jordans with those wild color combinations, Converse All-Stars with that "broken-in" look, and, of course, Reebok.

Jewelry has increased in popularity among many of our students. Plastic bracelets adorn the arms of a few people, and gold necklaces display that "macho" image. Swatches of all colors and styles, just about the most popular thing of the year, turn up everywhere.

Quite a few punk and new wave type haircuts, such as spiked hair and partly shaved heads, still amaze and frighten parents; however, that traditional "Catholic High haircut" remains "in."

Let's not forget the fashionable English language we use. We use hundreds of fashionable words such as "psyche," "radical," and that everpresent noise which Andy Dunn describes as "an exclamation of stupidity" ... "DURRTI!"

That "GO" Look. Mark McKenzie, at a glance, looks beset by a strange fungal disorder. It's those @%$"!!# amoeba again!

From Lamborghini To Letterman:

What Makes The Upperclassmen Tick.

Styles and trends change each year, naturally. This year the fads differed from any other, and polls taken by the juniors and seniors described what the average upperclassman liked and did in his spare time.

It went something like this. After a morning shower, the student "scarfed down" Pop Tarts and a bowl of Captain Crunch, all the while dreaming of the Porsche or Ferrari he wished to own.

Then, on the way to school, this hypothetical student "cranked on some tunes" by Ratt or Van Halen, accompanying them on his "air guitar." Or perhaps he would turn his radio to "Magic 105" to hear his favorite song, "Money for Nothing," by Dire Straits.

After school and supposedly after completing any homework, TV dominated the evening. The student particularly enjoyed police shows, such as "Miami Vice," and "Hill Street Blues." "The Bill Cosby Show," "Late Night with David Letterman," and "The Tonight Show" were the popular comedies.

On weekends, this average Catholic High student would attend a football game, escort a date to the movies, or simply "cruise." Once in a while he might even venture as far as "Fayettenam." He certainly kept himself busy!

As an added note, many students had favorite movies, including "Rambo," "Back to the Future," and "Commando." One person, however, listed "The Sound of Music," "Roller Boogie," and "Benji."

Mass Hysteria Hits Catholic High

Accompanying a pounding bass drum, "We will stomp you," echoed through the gym as the Purple and Gold Assault fired up the student body in preparation for a Friday night football game. The fans overflowed the school with spirit in anticipation of that all important game. But just how important are the fans? Very important according to head football coach, Roy Davis. "In close, emotional ball games, they make the difference between winning and losing."

After the singing of the Alma Mater, the pep rally shifts into high gear as the cheer leaders enact a skit depicting a member of the student body or faculty saving the day for the Rockets. This along with performances by the Mount Saint Mary cheerleaders and Rockettes, fills the fans with unmatched exuberance. The excitement peaks with the victory cheer and the playing of the fight song by the band.

"We lost 16 starters, but we have 600 returning fans that should make the difference."- Roy Davis encourage them all to show how much they appreciate the team. "Football games are a symbol of Catholic High's companionship and school spirit," says Dennis Lensing. No matter what the score is, the fans continue to support

Yet, the cheering is not over. As the stadium fills with students and other fans, the cheerleaders the team until the game is over. Coach Davis showed his appreciation for the fan support when he stated, "We lost 16 starters, but have 600 returning fans that should make the difference."

The fans know how important a team is. Whether it be basketball, football, tennis, golf, swimming, diving, or soccer, the team represents Catholic High to the entire community; however, without fan support, the athlete's ability would not really be appreciated.

Just Starting Out

Fine Effort In Practice

Practice sometimes starts before school for members of various teams. The football team, with its popularity and fame, dwarfs these activities in some regards, but they are successful nonetheless. The members of the teams really love the camaraderie and enjoy what they do. Even though the fierce drive for perfection manifests in all practice sessions, and the time involved disallows many other interests, the participants feel these extra-curricular activities deserve the time and energy expended.

"Drill team helps you build confidence. It's good to be part of a team with the caliber of guys associated with it," offered Hunter Holcomb. Practice for the drill team occurs every school day and on the weekends before the competitions. Yet, it stands as a team getting little recognition in comparison to the enormous amount of dedication poured into it.

The basketball team also consumes time, with year-round practice. Every activity period the team meets in the gym, perfecting plays and preparing for the season. Andy Ward comments, "Basketball practice gives the younger players a sense of meaning and the seniors a chance to prove their leadership."

Of course, basketball and drill team only symbolize the many hard-working teams. Practice is indeed an important part of the success achieved at Catholic High.

Down the runway. A view of the school's new auditorium shows the enormity of the addition. Seating 440 people, it will have a variety of uses.

Doing time. Students sit quietly during one of the day's study halls. The new study hall will enable one teacher to look over many students at once.

Thunderdome. The addition of the bandroom provides easy accessibility and better facilities for our band and a new view from Lee Street.

From Inconvenience To Comfort

$2,000,000 Elbow Room

It's finished! The 1985-86 school year marked the first real opportunity students had to use the new facilities. The difficult job of fundraising had finally come to a close. The long awaited additions included a new enlarged library, a spacious auditorium, and an easily accessible bandroom, six new classrooms, a better equipped weightroom, a biology laboratory, and an enormous study hall.

The spacious new library enabled the students to concentrate in a study-oriented atmosphere. Large windows offered a pleasant view of the newly landscaped Fletcher Plaza and other scenic views surrounding the school. Students in the adjoining study hall have access to the new periodical reading area, as well as the rest of the library.

The new auditorium is more than just an auditorium. Built-in moveable walls that divide the area into three separate lecture halls enhance the addition.

Other features include movie screens which can be lowered from the ceiling, a raised level stage, and air conditioning; the latter is an added treat for all! The band members and the athletes also received beautiful new facilities to call their own. Geo. "Rick" Richardson commented "It's nice. It's useful. It's intense. It has comfortable seats."

"The best part? The stage — it encourages the arts!"
-Bf. Richard

At Last Although Fletcher Plaza has shrunk with the completion of the new addition, the space has been put to good use.

"Where the @ # ! * & # @ ' am I?"
Jeff Wittig wanders aimlessly in the new corridor between classes.

Public Opinion

The new building prompted various reactions from Catholic High students. The general feeling of most students was that the building's advantages far outweighed the inconveniences caused by construction.

Scott Blackwell, commenting on the new library, said, "It's more organized and quiet. The big windows give it a pleasant feeling." Charles Schaefer said, "Now I have a quiet place where I can study before school." Mrs. Chudy, on the other hand, said she loved it but there were far too many hiding places for students.

Commenting on the auditorium, Mark Harrill said, "It will be helpful for class meetings, and when it's hot, many people will be able to meet in air conditioning." Marcus McAllister remarked, "The new auditorium lessens unbelievably the headaches and problems associated with having to build a stage for the play."

John Bauer, senior clarinet player, remarked about the bandroom, "The accoustics are much better and I enjoy the location. I will not miss slipping down the steps during the winter."

Out of all the comments there was rarely a complaint. Students were pleased that the facilities were completed and obviously enjoyed their use.

Directing Traffic. Keith Wren, manager of the physical fitness team, prepares a nasty workout in the new weightroom.

A Suitable Place. Teachers chow down on Madame Butler's fine cuisine in the teachers' new dining hall.

Not Again! Bandies regurgitate at the thought of yet another practice of "Eye of the Tiger".

Philosophers at Large. Tommy Tanner, Chad Fitz, Bruce Suskie, Steve Andrews, Steve Shirley, and Greg Simmons discuss life.

Shooting the Bull Intellectuals debate important topics, such as Monday Night Football, in the new faculty lounge.

"What do you mean?" "I'm never wrong!!" Mrs. Elias graciously awards Andy Ward his daily dose of nagging.

Unboxing the Auditorium. After weeks of anticipation, the colorful new seats arrived fulfilling Fr. Tribou's dream of an expanded home for his family.

A Final End With New Beginnings

"Where Do I Begin?"

At last Catholic High saw an official end to the new construction! On October 27, a triumphant Father Tribou and beaming Bishop McDonald finally tied up the troubles and complications associated with expansion. The dedication — the last step — celebrated the completion with a blessing mirroring the ground-breaking of over a year earlier. Father Tribou's dream was fulfilled.

With the choir of seniors, the band, and the Bishop's speech, the event became a heart-warming celebration, or so a few seniors felt: "I most vividly remember Bishop McDonald's informative sermon." [entitled "Where Do I Begin?"] — Kyle Echols.

"I was glad the additions were finally officially completed — especially because that meant no more irritating jack-hammers!" — John Campbell.

"The Bishop's sermon reflected the total support the Catholic congregation of Little Rock gives Catholic High." — Paul Crawford.

"The seniors' job of singing was the most spectacular ensemble of voices ever going to bless that auditorium!" — Matt Guise.

One moment, please. The band members entertained the audience while the Bishop left the auditorium to bless the rest of the new building.

Let us pray. Bishop McDonald lowers his head in prayer at the start of the Student Body Mass on December 6.

Blessing the Books Bishop McDonald consecrates the library.

Religion plays a key role at Catholic High. Every aspect of the school revolves around a central devotion to Christ and His teachings. His Excellency Bishop Andrew J. McDonald supports this ideal.

At certain special occasions, Bishop McDonald enforces the virtues instilled by Father Tribou. Each year he celebrates a Student Body Mass, and every student graduates with his blessings. Even more importantly, he helped celebrate the completion of the new building by giving a formal consecration on October 27. At each of these ceremonies, he enhanced the overall Christian theme of the school. Yes, Bishop McDonald is a true asset to the school.

Looking Back:

Fr. T's Boys Remember

Although this is a great year for CHS because of the new facilities, an even greater event occurred in 1961; that event was the opening of the new Catholic High school building. The change was incredible. Students who had studied in small dark classrooms and had walked in cramped corridors suddenly found themselves in a modern high school with spacious hallways and bright classrooms.

The original Catholic High consisted of three stately buildings at 25th and State streets. These buildings were adequate for over thirty years. 853 students graduated from the State Street campus, including two members of our staff, Mr. Imhauser ('52) and Fr. Frederick ('55).

One member of our staff Mr. Moran ('61), has the distinction of attending both schools. "The new building was unreal; it was so new, big, and clean. The building was like a whole new world," he said. There were fewer than 300 students enrolled at the time.

Under construction. An aerial view of the school.

The Lee Street building remained largely unchanged until last year, but several changes occurred. At one time the cafeteria was glassed in. Also, a senior commons once hid under the main stairwell but was removed to make way for the guidance office. The old library was enlarged once, and several classrooms changed in size.

Back For More

A good part of the present faculty are graduates of Catholic High. These include Mr. Althoff ('65), Mr. Hooper ('71), Mr.

Glancy ('77), Mr. Wells ('73), Mr. Ruth-erford ('80), Mr. Granberry ('77), and Mr. Marczuk ('74).

Forging Foreign Ties

Students from Abroad

Columbian Wisdom! Mario Arbelaez says, "The most important thing about the school is that the teachers actually show that they want to teach."

Exciting and unusual people roam the halls of this school every year. They, the foreign exchange students, travel great distances to attend Catholic High for nine months.

This year's foreign students represent a variety of exotic cultures. Mario Arbelaez comes from Columbia; Daniel Barbour represents New Zealand; Detliff Schneider is from West German; Miki Landa visits us from Peru. They help tie up international relations.

Genta Hataoka is an exception to the normal nine month routine. He has been at the school since the 1983-1984 school year. Since then he has experienced the Catholic High tradition, plus many extracurricular adventures, such as the European trip. Genta has become a popular member of the senior class and the school. He likes the school very much saying, "Less pressure is placed on the student than in my country, and the family feeling is great."

Everyone gains from having the foreign students, but the student body benefits the most. Those foreign students bring with them ideas, customs, and personalities that make their stay here at Catholic High exciting and enjoyable for everyone.

Detliff speaks! Detliff Schneider along with the rest of the foreign exchange students address the parents at parent-teacher night.

Maldito Sea! Mario Arbelaez checks his Spanish-American dictionary for the right American words to fit the moment.

Studs of the world. The five foreign students are Genta Hataoka, Miki Landa, Daniel Barbour, Mario Arbelaez, and Detliff Schneider

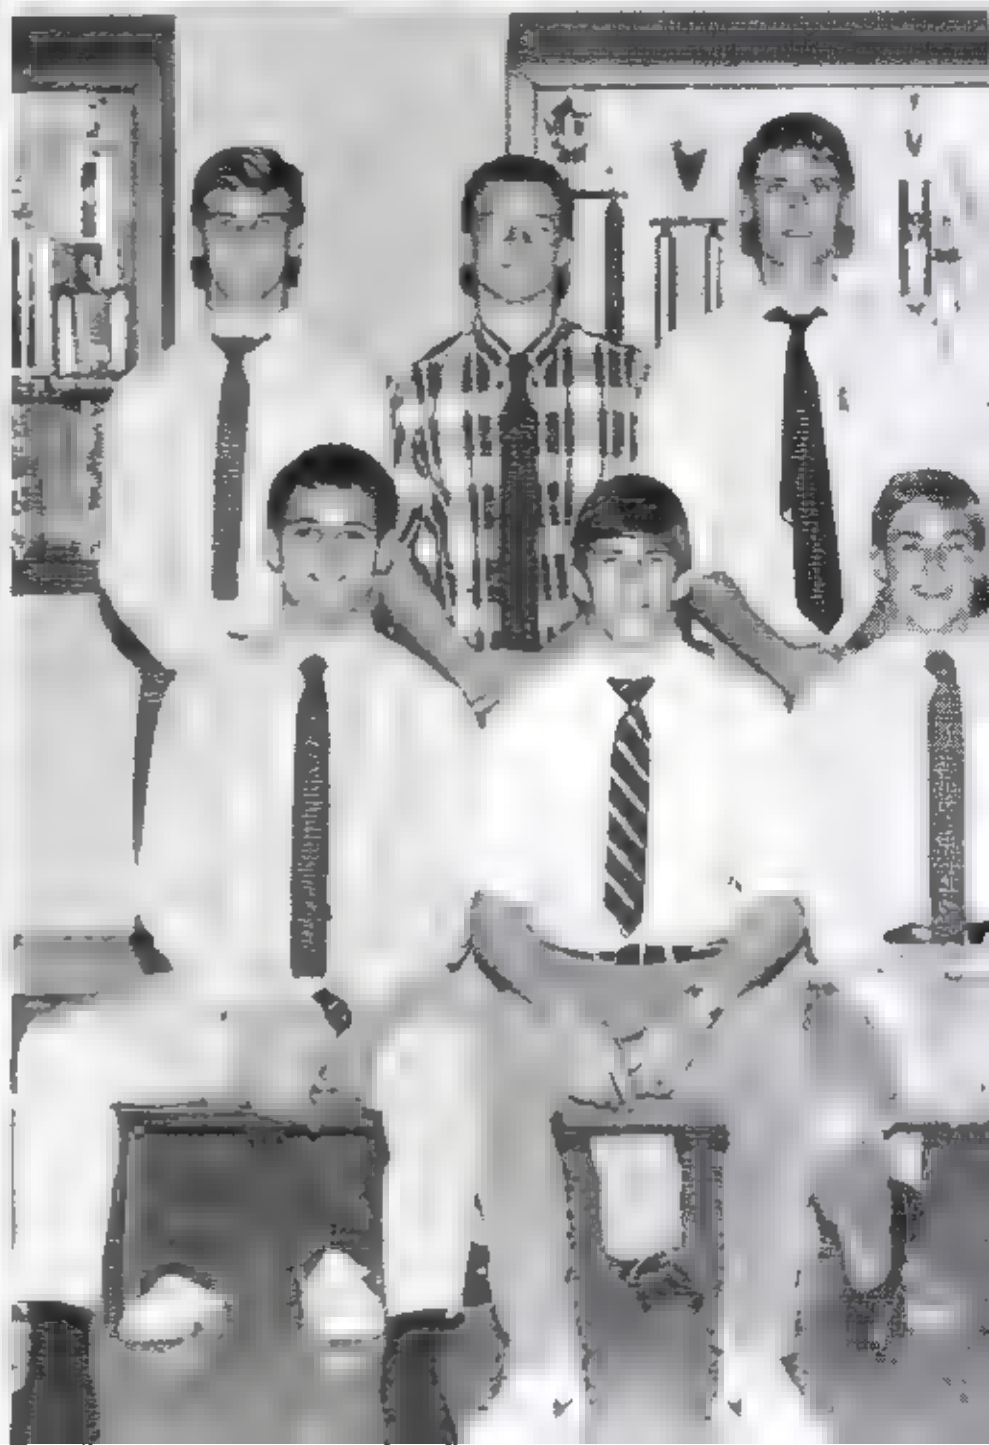

All the Governor's Men. Tommy Tanner, Randy Van Echo, and Bobby Matthews attended Governor's School last summer at Hendrix in Conway.

Jamming. Marcus McAllister, Stanley Whitby, and Robbie Loket look on in horror as William Fletcher, John Monroe, and Derek Hardberger strum their air rackets at yearbook camp.

The Selected Few. Chris Setliff, John Knight, Jamie Mago, Andy Ward, Jay Van Dover, Kyle White, Matt Hartnedy, Marcus McAllister, and Walker Lasiter were selected by peer vote last year to attend Boy's State.

School Does Not End In May

Students Devote Part Of Their Summer To Education

Boy's State was a small world existing for a very dramatic week. Each boy left a very definite impression. Some guys hit hard but scarcely left an imprint; others avowed themselves subtly and yet distinctly engraved their mark.

Boy's State was a test of ability and initiative. Either you were the dealer or you were dealt with. Order was instantaneous; the leaders stepped forward and the followers covered down. It was a powerful and sometimes frightening magnification of the reality of life. If you want to achieve something, you must act swiftly and work hard.

-Kyle White

During the first week in July, while many students were taking it easy, the yearbook staff attended the annual yearbook seminar at Ouachita Baptist University. The seminar provided staff member with a comprehensive study of layout and writing techniques.

Free time was a scarce commodity, for a lot of material was shoved into four days of sessions. Nobody seemed to mind the heavy workload, however, and they enjoyed working with the dynamic teachers.

Mark Longinotti best sums it up: "It gave me the knowledge to make a good yearbook, and the desire to want one."

Three Catholic High students attended the Arkansas Governor's school this summer. Bobby Matthews, Randy Van Echo, and Tommy Tanner studied in the fields of visual art, social science, and English. The term "studied" is used lightly because having fun was the number one priority. But even that is illusory, because mere existence in such a society based on intellect alone led to a growth of the mind.

There were three areas of study. Area one was the major subject of a student. Area two was a logical philosophy class, the most hated and loved of all courses. One can well imagine the frustration of a student who is asked to prove that he himself exists. Area three, a basic psychology class, taught different theories concerning people in action.

No boring repetitious homework was required, and no exams were taken. Students learned about pressure. One teacher said, "When my friends ask me about it (Governor's School) I tell them it is a process. If they wish to know more, I go into the two hour explanation."

Arkansas Governor's school is like an inside joke - an inside joke is by far the best kind, but must be experienced to understand.

Summer Work. Marcus McAllister, Stanley Whitby, and Mark Rechtin set the wheels in motion for the yearbook.

My Fellow Americans. John Knight addresses a full auditorium in a "political rally" while running for office.

A Summer Excursion

European Tour Broadens Students' Experience

For at least 47 people the summer of '85 will be unforgettable. The school sponsored European tour was an educational adventure that broadened the horizons and culturally enriched those who participated. The party consisted of 36 CHS students, four guests from other schools and seven adults.

Starting the journey in Frankfurt, the group made its way through southern Germany and western Austria. This was the favorite region of a few because of the beautiful, clean landscape and jovial atmosphere.

Italy was the next leg of the tour. Several of the cities visited were Verona, Bologna, Venice, Rome, Assisi, Florence, and Pisa. Italian favorites were the food and the discos. Rome had the most fascinating attractions with its ancient ruins and the Vatican.

In Switzerland, the party stopped in Lugano and Lu-cenne, two beautiful lake cities. The snow peaked Alps and the very friendly Swiss people made this the favorite country for many of the travelers.

The group also spent two days in Paris, the City of Lights. This motto is no exaggeration when the city is seen from the top of the Eiffel Tower at night. The Parisian subway system made it very easy to travel to different parts of the city quickly. The shops, museums, and the Palace of Versailles made it an exciting stay.

The weary party could tell it was nearing home after a short cruise across the English Channel and the ride to London. London was best remembered for the markets, interesting people and cafes. Communication with the locals was much easier with the very small language barrier. Like Paris, London had a subway that broadened opportunity for exploration.

Other than slight inconveniences such as getting stuck in a Florentine elevator, there were no major problems along the way. The councillors want to keep the trip an annual event, so everyone in the school will be able to take advantage of this great experience.

Reverent crew Rechtin, Campbell, Echols, Robertson, Padilla, Barron Hatoaka, and Barringhaus sharply contrast the chapel of Assisi.

"... the time of my life and an enlightening experience. A learning opportunity which should be taken by everyone who has the chance.

David Stobaugh

"It was fascinating to finally see all the interesting landmarks I had previously only seen in pictures or read about."

John Campbell

"I really loved meeting the people and being exposed to the European culture. It was personally enriching and I will never forget it."

Kyle Echols

Making his move, Eddie Barron closes in on tour guide Marietta in view of the British Parliament. Is it stunts like this that earned him the title "Eddie Action"?

The ultimate chapel. Chris Papacek and Mark Harrill cruise through St. Peter's Square, admiring the majesty of the Vatican.

La joie de vivre en France. The whole crew has a family portrait in front of the most familiar European monument, Le Tour d'Eiffel

Keep it up, Hoiman. Graduate Herman Barringhaus attempts his lifetime goal, straightening the leaning tower of Pisa.

Student Rule

The Governing Body Of Catholic High

High School elections offer the students a chance to choose the candidate they feel will best represent their school. The 1985-86 elections did just that. A group of six candidates, former Boy's State members, ran for the coveted office of president. They were Matt Hartnedy, Jamie Mago, Chris Setliff, Jay VanDover, Andy Ward, and Kyle White.

Matt Hartnedy won the election after his crowd-raising "ordinary student" campaign speech. Jay VanDover was elected to Vice President, after being Sophomore and Junior class Presidents, and Andy Ward became Secretary-Treasurer.

The Officers have a wide variety of responsibility around the school. They make the morning announcements, organize intramurals, discuss students' problems and concerns with Father Tribou, and help choose people to make committees. Once elected, they make their presence known by talking with students and going to school sponsored activities.

Homeroom representatives also hold a major role in representing students. They are elected by their peers in each homeroom to lead the class. Such things as choosing intramural basketball and tug-of-war teams, carrying absentee slips to the office, and collecting money for different projects are a few of their jobs.

■ "It was the best I'd seen so far. My mom thought so, too, and she's seen three ... It meant I'd finally achieved my goal ... having the same ring gives us a sense of brotherhood." -Bryan Gattis

■ "It means more to me than almost anything else in the entire world. The senior ring mass was the first time we were able to come together as seniors in such an important occasion." -Mark Schulte

"I feel like this group is the best in the world. There is no equal. The boys feel a base in Jesus Christ." -Miguel Landa

■ "The ceremony itself was particularly emotional. My mom cried ... The ring itself represents an achievement of the highest quality — the graduating of a senior." -Russel Krengel

■ "It really hit deep ... It's a burden — but it's a good burden." -Michael Safly

■ "I got it! Now I feel like a real senior!" -Genta Hataoka

■ "This time, we were the seniors looking up at the wondering faces ... All the seniors started showing a better sense of maturity. Now, they better represent the school." -Benton Johnson

■ "The senior ring is a way for underclassmen to look up to us. However, I also think the senior ring mass needs to be closed to the seniors. It's something special for the seniors." -Robert Mancini

■ "Since all seniors have the same ring, it is a symbol and a standard of Catholic High ... I wear the ring proudly, letting everyone know I am a Catholic High senior." -Greg Lensing of each senior pops into gear silently they grin at the idea as they remember classes before them and ponder how to top that class's antics. Then it is time. Everywhere people change from their normal, respected attire to outlandish rags and garments never worn in public. Many bring props and other assistance to perfect their off-the-wall appearances. Soon the wildly-adorned mob assembles behind the school for an impromptu photo session. All the while eyes pass from classmate to classmate finding amusement in the ridiculous ways others have decked out for the event. The favorites of this year included many of the popular creations of years before. Rednecks, hunters, commandos, and cheerleaders came in full force with even a representation by one-half the "Blue Brothers."

Tradition holds high esteem at Catholic High. This is evident at the many events during the school year, such as Senior Banquet, and finally Graduation. Normally these events embody formality and reverence. One tradition, however, breaks the mold: the Senior Crazy Picture. After a few weeks of school, students often grow weary of the hectic routine and find it increasingly difficult to keep that bit of insanity deep within suppressed. The Crazy Picture allows students to turn their imaginations loose upon themselves, producing a myriad of results — from a shotgun-toting, boot-wearing, skoal-dipping redneck to a small, half-naked Oriental covered only by a bass guitar. The mumblings of the crowd soon increased to loud outcries in expectation of the Catholic High and McClellan game. This wasn't any ordinary game for Catholic High and Mount Saint Mary's, but a very momentous one. This was their 1985 Homecoming Game.

Just before the conflict between the two teams was set to begin and after a special performance by the Marine Corps JROTC drill team, the Homecoming Court was introduced.

Chosen as this year's queen was Anna Baetcke of M.S.M.. Unfortunately, when she began to give her speech, the microphone refused to cooperate. After a few moments though, an undaunted Anna relayed her message.

The game itself was "tremendous!" as described by an attending junior.

Needless to say, the Rocket victory over McClellan by a score of 14-7 was sufficient reparation for the defeat inflicted upon them last Homecoming by Mills.

The excitement of winning the game carried over into the dance, held the following Saturday night.

As an anonymous senior contemplated about the dance, "It was a good dance considering the restrictions put upon such activities by the conservative attitude of the Christian like atmosphere." The dance, although it was quite hot proved to be a great great success.

"I liked this Homecoming better than last year's 'cause my date was better lookin' and I could drive!"

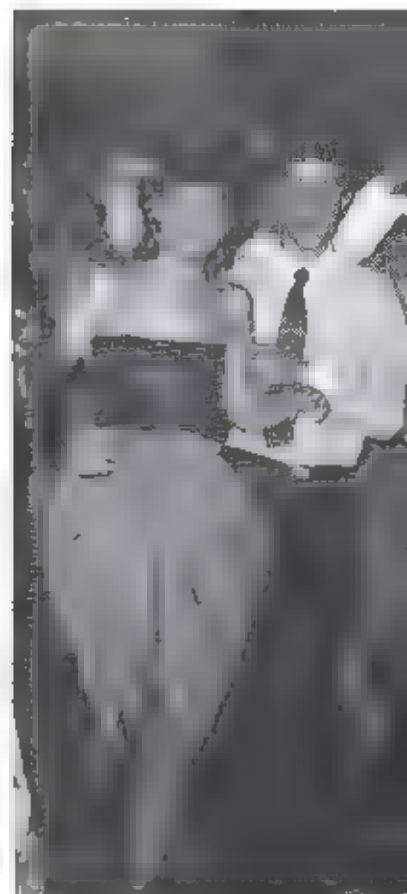

— Michael Juniper

magical evening.

The relationship between Mt. St. Mary's Academy for Girls and Catholic High School for Boys has been a long-lasting one. Together, they have grown in the eyes of the Little Rock community as fine, structured examples of quality Catholic education. Each supports the other through combined extracurricular activities.

Although student opinion varies, the overall response was tremendous. Every student expressed a vehement view and had no trouble in expressing it:

"They keep the spirit going." -Robert Izor "They are dedicated to the projects in which they are involved." -Brother Richards

"Nice to be with — I wish they could be here all the time!" -Jim Battreal

Getting Involved

PTO And "Boss Day Event" Show Catholic High Family Unity

On Wednesday October 16, 1985, Father Tribou lost control for the first time in over 30 years. Under the covert leadership of Mr. Wells and Coach Pilcher, the entire faculty and student body secretly organized an assembly to celebrate National Boss Day for Father Tribou and Father Frederick.

At eighth period, students left their respective classrooms and made their way to the gym. Mr. Wells then led the two guests of honor to the assembly, where they received a standing ovation. Matt Hartnedy, Jay VanDover, and Andy Ward, student body representatives, presented them with two $100 gift certificates, one each, to the Villa and Coy's. They also gave them a $57 donation to the building fund. The money was a gift from Catholic High students and faculty. Father Tribou and Father Frederick were so pleased that they dismissed school early that day.

Parents, also, became involved this year when they turned out in great numbers for the two parent-teacher meetings.

There were at least twelve hundred at the first meeting in October. Father Tribou gave a speech warning parents about what boys will sometimes do and reminded them to be constantly on the watch. He also stressed the importance of studying. Performances were given by the rum and Bugle Corps, Drill Team, and the Band.

Following the performances, parents went through a mock school day. Teachers explained what they expect from the students and their goals for the year. However, this did not truly represent a typical school day, because instead of going to study hall, the parents were treated to punch and cookies.

Parents, students, and faculty show they care.

Is this a legitimate holiday? Father T. rewards our efforts with an early dismissal.

Lensing's Log: Stardate 8510.25

In recent years, many Catholic High athletic programs have received a good deal of publicity due to their excellence. Accomplishments such as the 1984 football championship build the image of a school of jocks. However, the CHS academic curriculum remains a challenging program comparable to any other.

Students take two years of Latin or French, typically as freshman and sophomores. Many students find a foreign language a mind-stretching experience.

Also as ninth and tenth graders, students further their mathematics with Algebra I and geometry. Some may even continue their education with Algebra II Trig, advanced math, and, for the prospective engineer, calculus.

Perhaps the most interesting courses offered are those in the science department. All students take biology, and budding doctors may take anatomy as seniors. Also available are physical science and chemistry. Finally, for the masochistic, there is physics, generally regarded as the hardest course offered.

In the social studies department freshmen take world history, which compresses the history of civilization into one year. Juniors study the history of America from its colonial origins up through the modern era. Seniors satisfy their political curiosity in national problems, focusing on today's troubles.

So, the Catholic High experience involves much more than football championships, crack drill teams, and nationally recognized physical fitness teams. Its fine academic programs instill the knowledge and discipline for success in life.

Extra Credits

■ Many volunteer mothers have contributed by giving their time to aid students in the library. Thirty-three mothers came on a regular basis and sixteen acted as substitutes. Not only do they stamp books, but they also organize and shelve books, help in decorating the book cases in the library entrance, and keep students quiet. One very special person, Mrs. Mary Ellen Koehler, has prepared the overdue list for fourteen years.

■ Kent Larrabee, a Quaker who promotes a message of peace, paid a visit to Mr. Moran's sixth period national problems class during first semester. Mr. Larrabee traveled through Russia in 1984 and since then has given presentations on Russian Life.

■ Eight Catholic High boys attended Student Congress held at the Camelot Hotel in Little Rock. Mrs. Bonner, the communications teacher, chose them according to the quality of congressional bills they had written. During the session, they prepared speeches and submitted two bills, one of which passed the House and Senate. In addition, Ted Upshaw won the Democratic nomination for Speaker of the House.

■ SMU honored Father Frederick as a teacher who made an impressive impact on a student's development. James Gaston, a 1984 graduate, nominated him during a competition at SMU.

Challenges Lie In Special Projects

"Term paper." Those two simple words bring about a change in students that rivals Dr. Jekyll's. Students don't like to be told that they must do term papers and other such projects. The anticipated work strikes dread into their hearts. Bill Raetz says such assignments "test your ability to work in an extreme hurry."

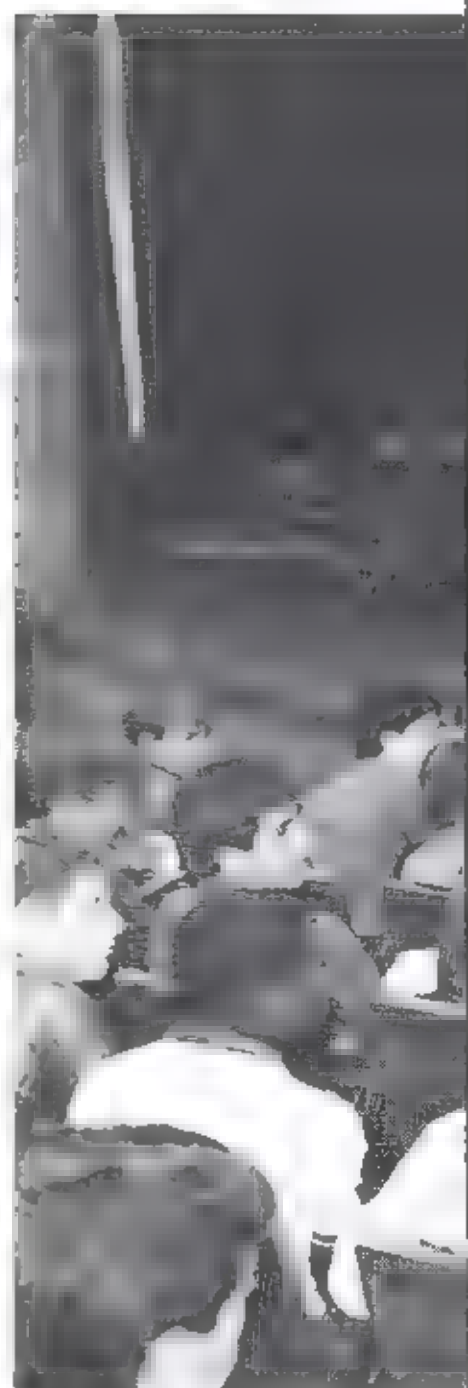

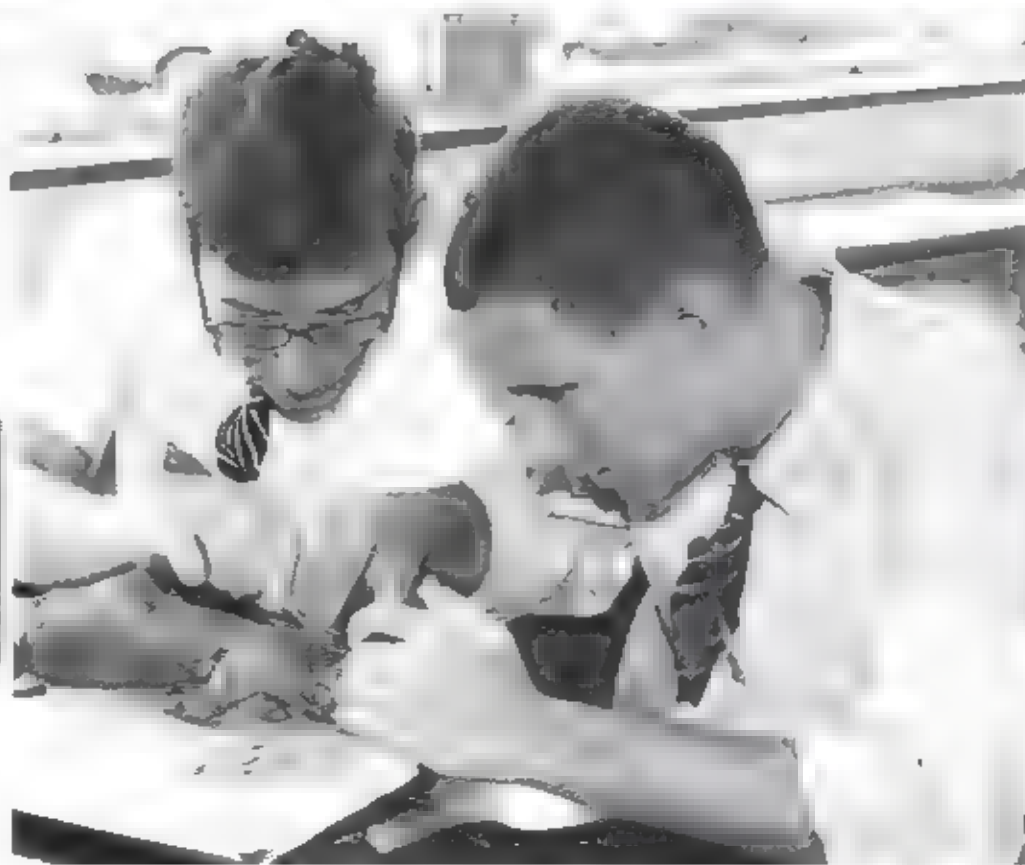

A number of assignments given by teachers at Catholic High really cause a panic. One of the most feared is Mr. Marczuk's Time magazine. Freshmen in his world history class must choose a year in history to compile a magazine detailing events of that year. Greg Luyet says, "It was the hardest thing you'll ever love." This high level of difficulty has a purpose. According to Mr. Marczuk, it promotes a historian type knowledge, it teaches library skills, and it shows the techniques of footnotes and bibliography.

Upgrading Health

Sophomores Get A Change

As of July 1987, students must have one unit in physical education and one-half a unit in health education, along with other subjects not previously required to graduate. This means that sophomores of the 1985-1986 school year are the first to take health education as a required subject. Although students in other schools must have a full semester of instruction to get the half-unit, Catholic High students do not. Father Tribou gained special permission from Governor Bill Clinton to teach the classes in a different way. Sophomores must attend ten scheduled lectures given by local physicians and must also pass a written exam over the information provided.

Teaching Aids

Students Need Them

Catholic High teachers rank well above normal standards; however, not only do we have some of the best teachers, but we have some of the best teaching aids.

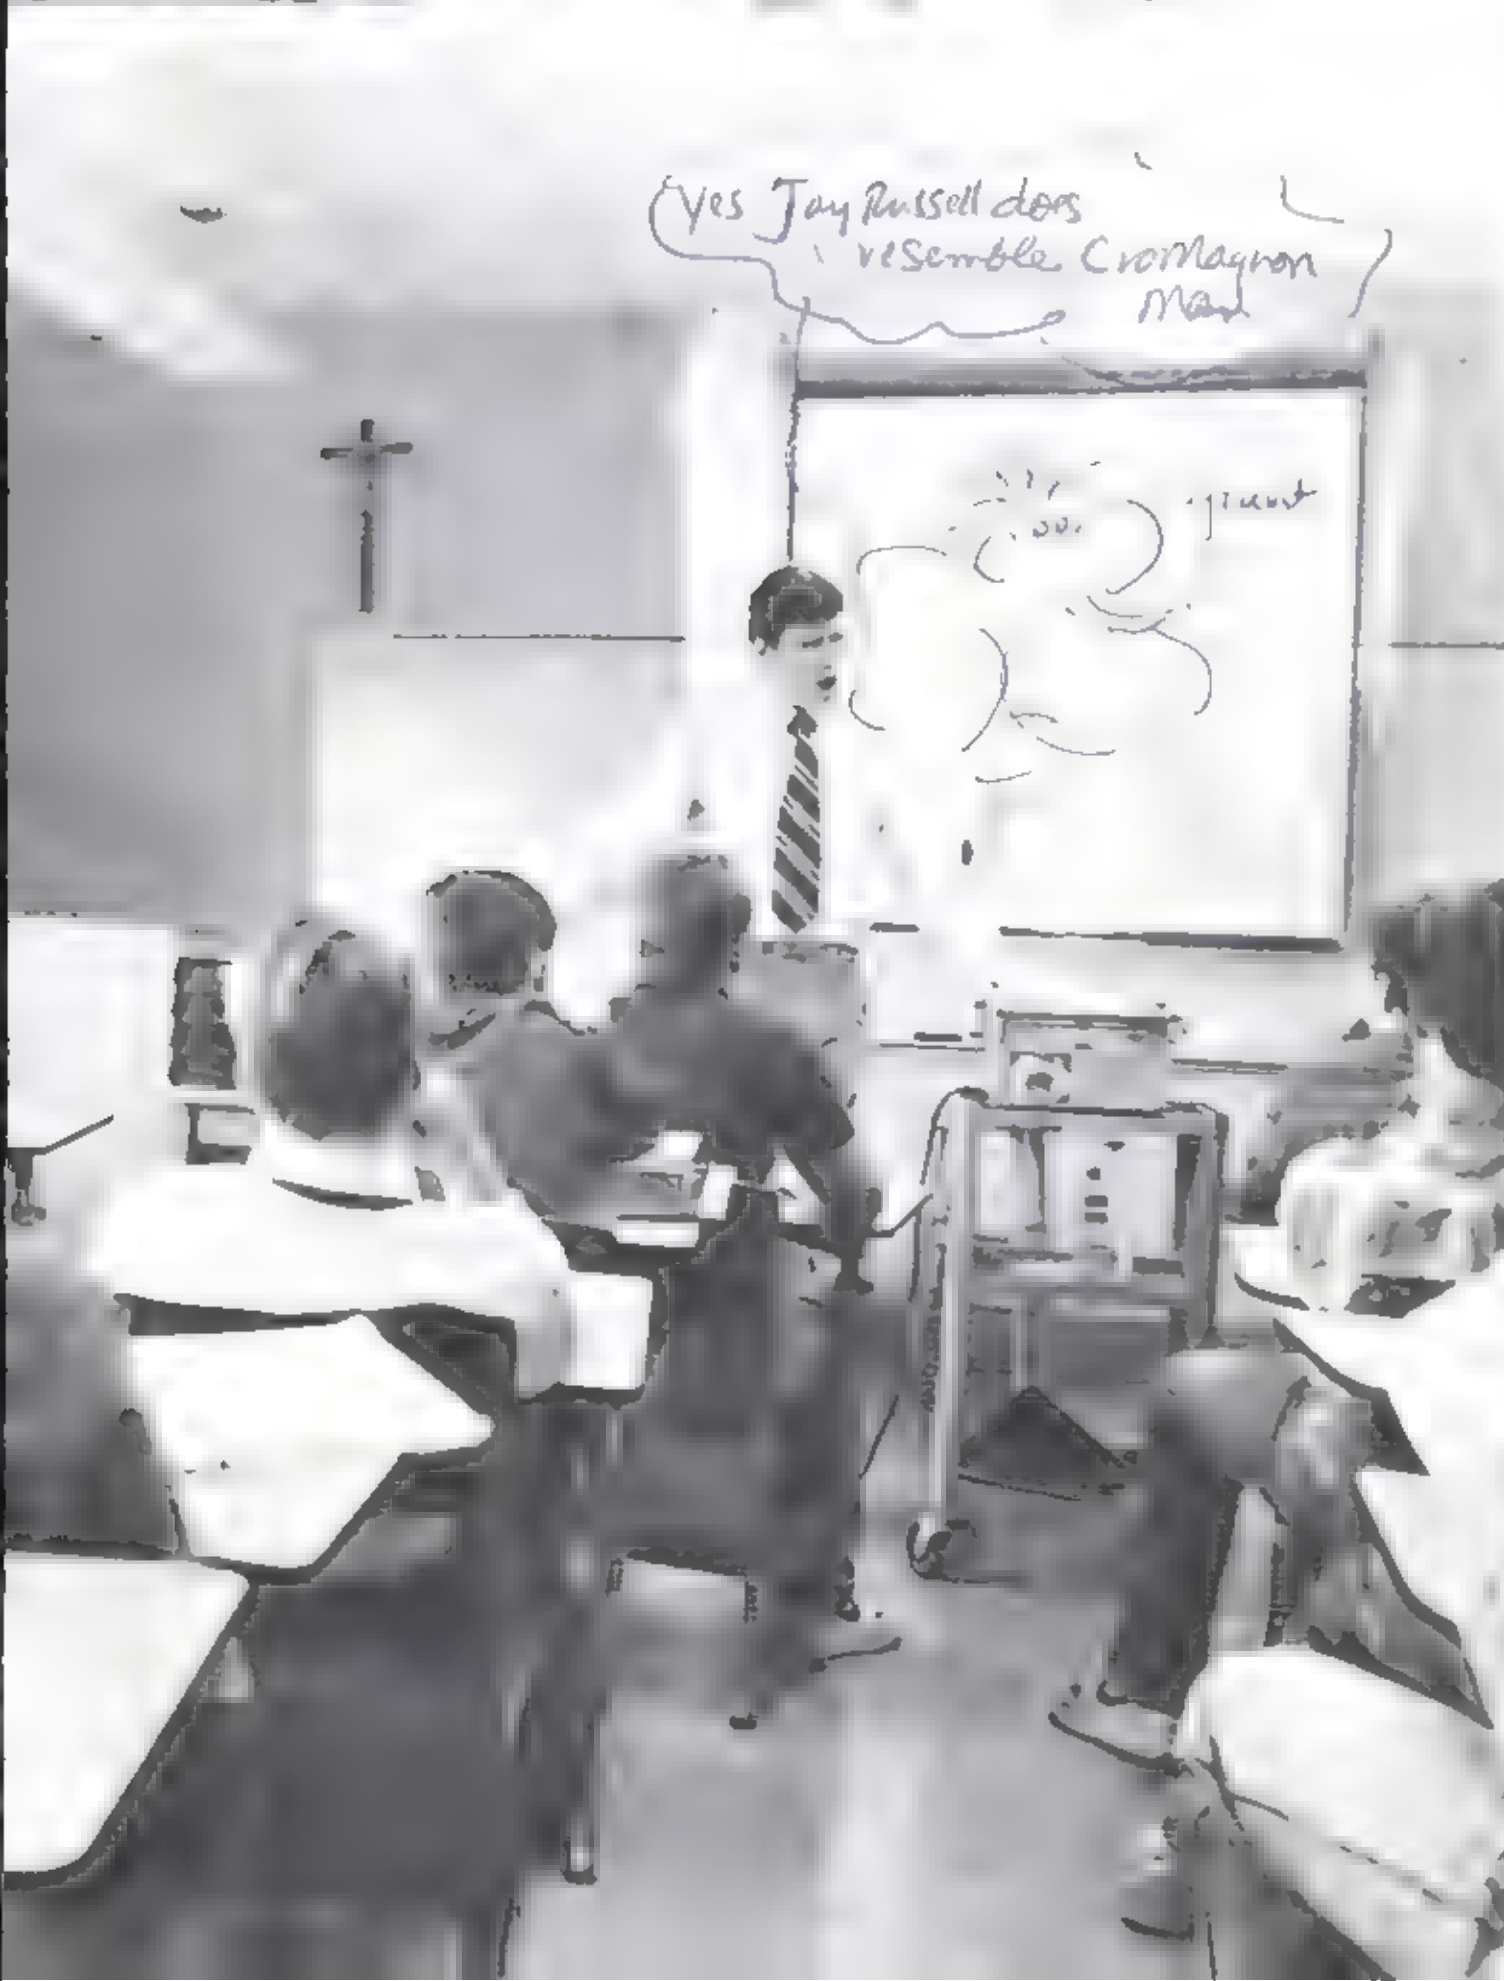

One such aid is our television broadcasting system. Each classroom has a black and white television monitor through which students view the morning announcements. Also, our English teachers work through Father Frederick in setting up video adaptations of some of the junior and senior reading selections to be seen during class periods. Other teachers do the same with educational material found in the studio's "library" of tapes. During the Easter season, students get to see "The Day Christ Died" as part of what might be considered a "Lenten promotional." Aside from this specific programming, students watch a random assortment of taped programs during the ROTC monthly formations.

Another aid available to our students is the microfilm material located in the library. The school, for about 5 years, has had two microfilm viewers and one microfiche viewer. Four hundred plus reels of microfilm make up the New York Times High School Collection. This collection contains historical events dating from 1851-1979. Not every newspaper is recorded, but there are articles that high school students might consider valuable in research. In addition to these reels, Mrs. Chudy receives a new reel each month which contains current events. These reels are used with the microfiche.

Student Winners

Grades are to a student as scores are to an athlete," so says Jason Hicks, a sophomore. This is a point well made and well remembered, but as we all know, student excellence not only encompasses classroom grades but other areas of achievement as well.

In keeping with previous years, Catholic High, once again, had the highest percentage of seniors in Arkansas earning National Merit Semi-Finalist status. PSAT scores determine these finalists. This year's National Merit Semi-Finalists were Michael Emmel, Greg Lensing, Marcus McAllister, Brian Snider, Tommy Tanner, Randy VanEcko, and John Verlenden.

The Hugh O'Brian Award, an award given to sophomores who demonstrate outstanding leadership qualities, was presented this year to Steve Skretkowicz. The award entitled Steve to attend an all-expense paid HOBY (Hugh O'Brian Youth) Arkansas Leadership Seminar. Steve represented the school as he and other sophomores met with leaders in business, education, government, and other professions. This "interaction" between future leaders and present day professionals strives to help motivate, train, and reward these young men. Previous Catholic High recipients have been Ricky Marendt in the 1983-1984 school year and Richard Walt of the 1984-1985 school year. Richard attended last year's seminar and described it as "extremely beneficial."

Manning The Files Brother Keeps Tabs On All

High school students, especially seniors, face a venture into the real world, starting with college. They need help in choosing the correct path. The school counselor provides one of the vital parts in this decision-making, and Brother Richard is no exception. In fact, he goes above and beyond his duty. He distributes college and scholarship information, makes college recommendations, and counsels students, not only in their college needs, but their personal needs as well. Aside from these tasks, Brother Richard handles all incoming test scores, such as the SAT, PSAT, and ACT, and award applications. When asked what his most challenging role was, he replied that keeping all the college information organized was the only really tough thing to do.

Yes, Brother ... thank you, Brother. (When's he gonna let me leave?) Brother Richard counsels Lane Tatom.

Preparing A Future Students Search For A Perfect College

Graduation! For some it is the end of many years of schooling, for others it is the beginning of four or more years in a college or university.

A great deal of time goes into deciding the college one wants to attend. Tests have to be taken, recommendations have to be written, and the student has to decide whether or not the college is for him. At many schools, deciding on a school is done by the student through college books and the school counselor. The same is done by the Mount St. Mary and Catholic High students who also have an advantage. This advantage is an annual assembly of representatives from colleges and universities from all over the nation. This assembly is known as College Night.

At College Night, which was on Nov. 6, both Mount St. Mary's and Catholic High juniors and seniors (with some freshmen and sophomores) were provided with an opportunity to be exposed to many colleges and universities from all over the nation. Representatives came from as far north as Wisconsin (Marquette Univ.), New York (West Point), and Michigan (Northwood Institute), as far south as Louisiana (Louisiana Tech.), Alabama (Univ. of Alabama), from the west came Oklahoma (Oral Roberts Univ., S.M.U., Southwestern Univ., Texas Christian Univ., Univ. of Dallas, and St. Gregory's College); eastern schools were from North Carolina (Duke Univ.), Washington D.C. (Georgetown), Massachusetts (M.I.T., Harvard), Connecticut (Yale).

A great diversity of schools, ranging from "blue-chip" to those ranked as "less-competitive," were present. Nearly 70 schools were represented. Every student was given the chance to learn more about the schools which he or she had hopes of attending.

Three thirty-minute periods were designated for lecture periods. Although there were only three sessions, students were able to roam around and talk with representatives at any time outside the three periods.

For many underclassmen it was a time to look at colleges and get a feel of how the application process works. For some seniors who had not previously decided on a college, it was the time to get started. Most others just wanted to take another look at the schools which they had already selected.

Many students had strong feelings about College Night. Nicole Sutter, a Mount senior, said, "I feel that it is essential for every student. It helps broaden the college horizon, yet helps stipulate one's own final choice."

Wade Bray states, "College Night is a good way to get ideas about colleges you are interested in. Even freshman and sophomores should attend."

Ramon Escobar added, "With an abundance of colleges, universities, and higher education institutions in existence today, it is impossible to truly know which is the best, most suitable for you. In this respect College Night provides vital information in terms of acceptance, college life, and graduate schools. College Night proves to be beneficial."

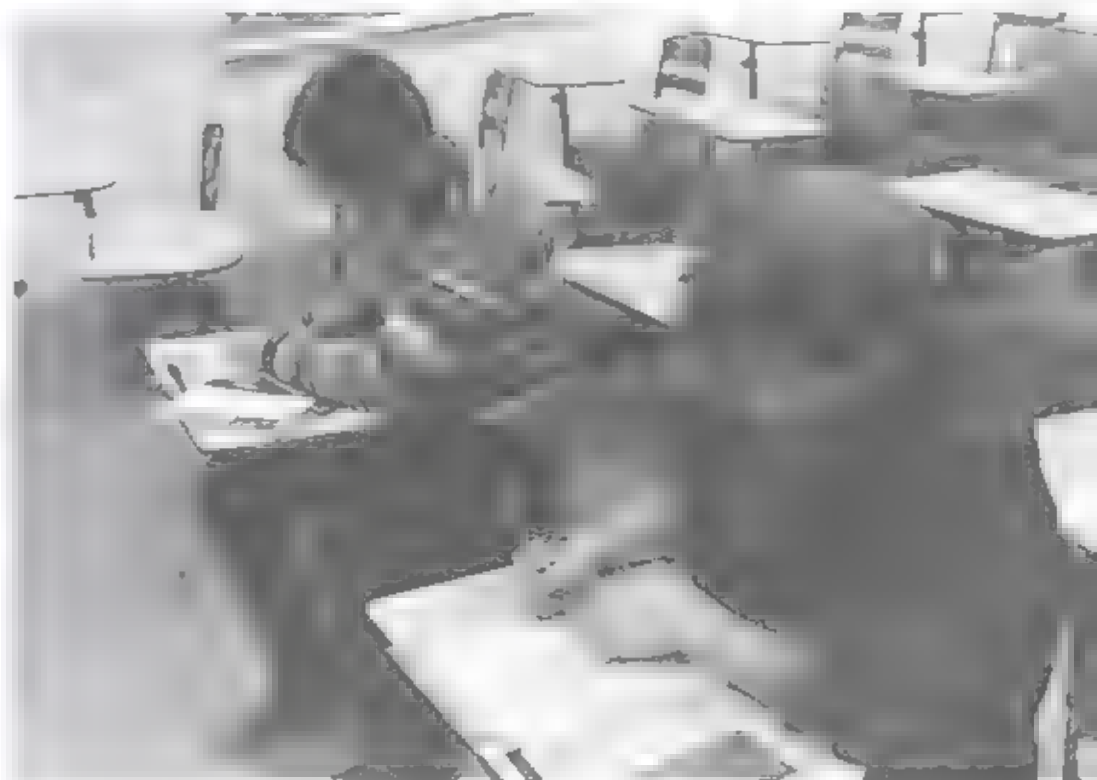

Steven Lohr thinks, "Because I was a junior it wasn't as crucial as it is for seniors. Next year I hope to attend with definite plans."

This year's College Night was a big success. Many colleges and universities sent representatives, and many students took time to visit and talk to the representatives of each school.

What a choice! Mark Schulte takes time to wonder which college he likes best.

Where's Yale? Doug Berry wanders through the halls searching for his dream college.

Foreign Material

Languages Take Students By Storm

Many students in their freshman and sophomore year dread the two years of foreign language more than anything else, including algebra and biology. At Catholic High, the French classes are taught by Brother Richard and Mrs. Gray. The very colorful Mr. Moore teaches Latin. BASIC, the language of computers and an ever increasing number of people, is taught by Mr. Althoff and Coach Rutherford.

Mr. Moore, a native of two years at Catholic High. He employs a variety of techniques for this subject. Of these, he considers deduction, induction, and student instruction to be the most valuable. He describes deduction as moving from the general to the specific, while induction is the opposite: moving from particulars to the general. Text, vocabulary, and derivatives receive greatest emphasis. All these add to bring a solid class with only two failures last year.

In French, Brother Richard and Mrs. Gray both prefer the audio-lingual method, that is, the students hear the language and repeat it. Both classes stress memorization and repetition. Although a high level of difficulty accompany the courses, only a small number fail.

Computer education is an ever-increasing need in today's society. Catholic High reflects this trend by providing a course in BASIC programming. This course lasts one semester. One large "digital" system serves both teachers and students, and a micro-computer aids in the functioning of the school.

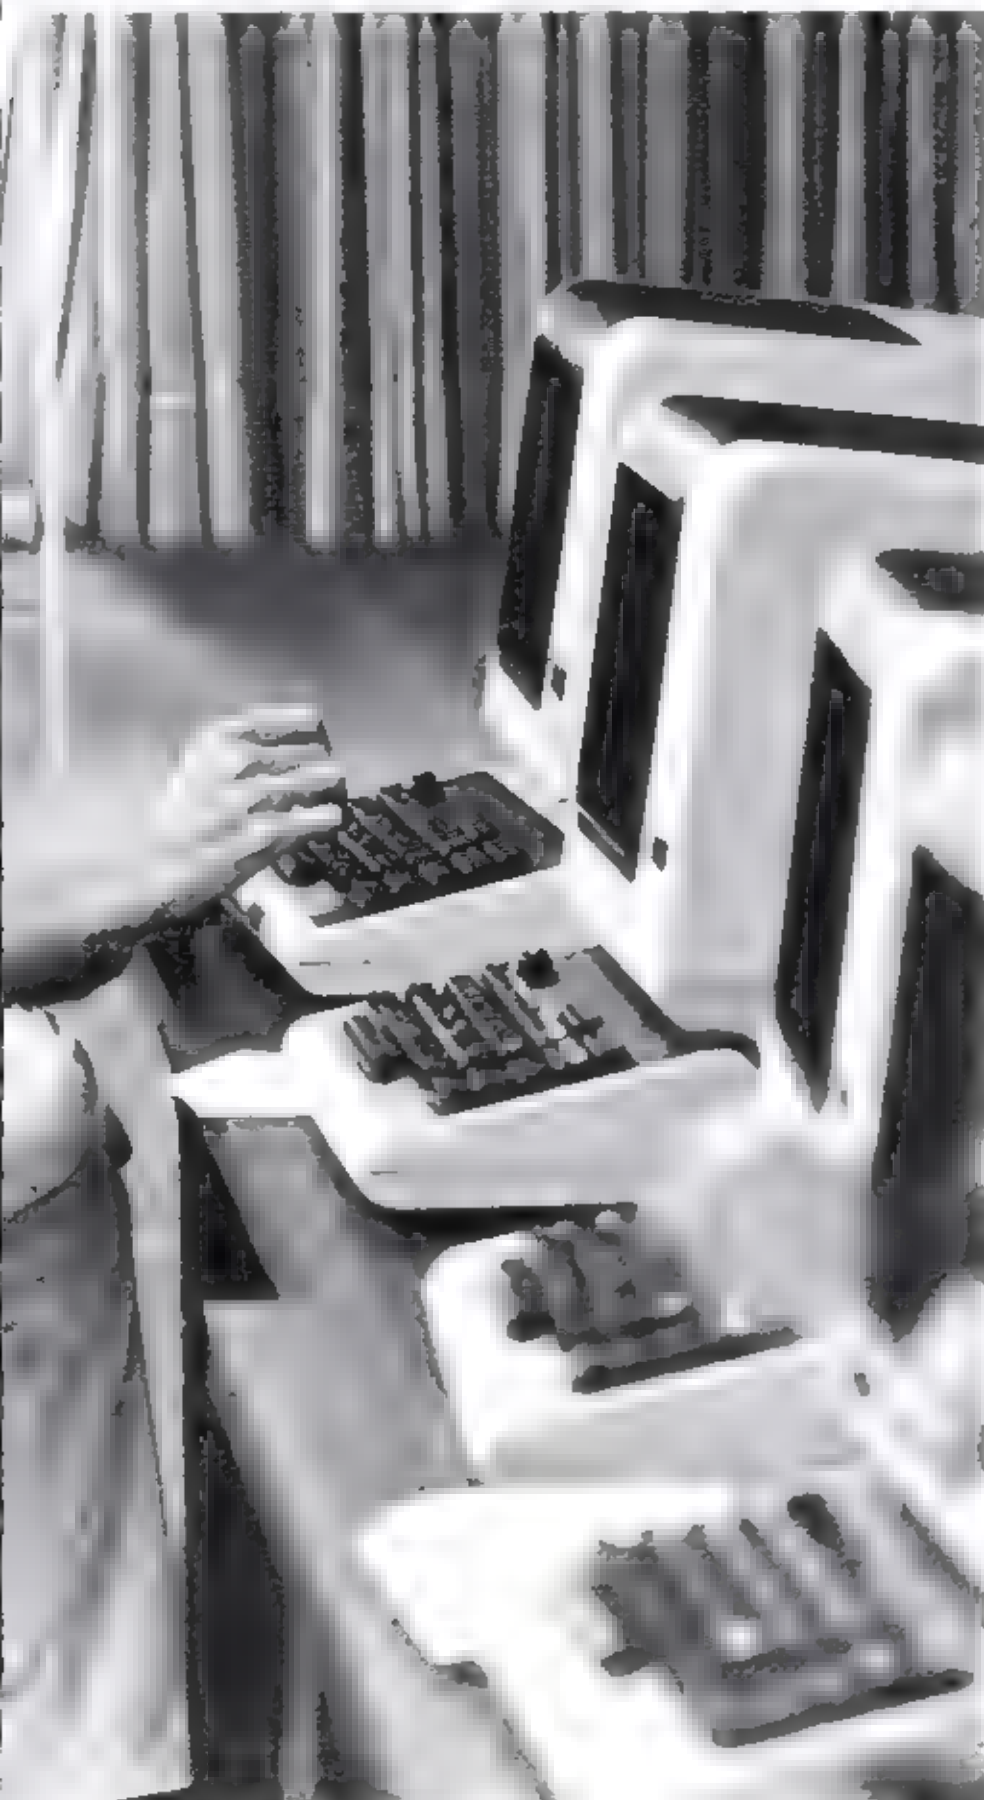

Yes. French is the language of love and yes, you're going to love this class whether you like it or not! Brother Richard "spells it out" in French class.

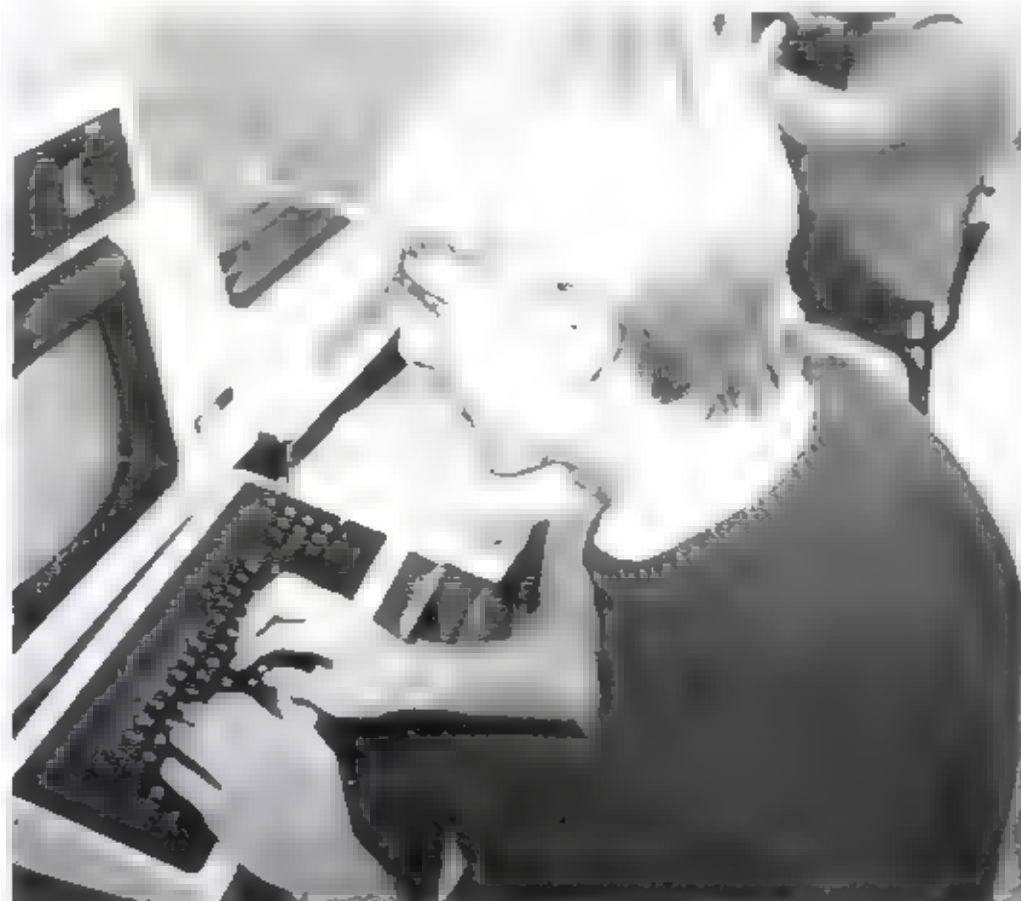

Let's see, what's the password to Mr. Althoff's class records? John Vines works fervently in computer class.

Look at that student changing his gra -- Wait! that's not a student, it's Mr. Rutherford. Mr. Rutherford uses one of the many computer terminals.

Don't you ever make fun of French! You can make fun of Latin all you want -- but never French! Mrs. Gray instructs her French students.

Knowledge Of Knight

Catholic High motivates its students in the pursuit of academic achievement. Yet no one can be content with merely studying. All students need some free time for leisure activities to enjoy themselves and recover from the rigorous burden of school work.

Some of the more musically inclined students relax by participating in the CHS Band. Led by Mr. Pritchett, these fellows jam the day away, allowing the school to enjoy their music.

For those unaccustomed to playing music, physical fitness with Col. Hennelly gives a chance to unwind. They share a dream of competing in the "national," a nationwide competition. This vision pushes them beyond their physical and mental limits, giving them a rewarding sense of satisfaction.

Still, many students do not care for the workout scene but enjoy the resulting mental discipline. The ROTC program can solve their problem. Under the guidance of Col. Hennelly and Sgt. Shaffer, the cadets learn leadership, gain self confidence, and cultivate a respect for authority.

A less intense activity is the TV crew, headed by Fr. Frederick. Students prepare for morning announcements, man the control panel, and operate the cameras. Much time goes into learning the mechanics of running a television studio. These students are certainly appreciated for their neverending service.

In view of all the activities housed within the halls of Catholic High, a leisure experience suitable for each and every member exists. Always remember .. "Students do not live by study alone."

A World Tied Up In Communications

Radio Club And TV Crew Use Technical Skills For Broadcasting

One of the most highly publicized but truly misunderstood of the clubs in school is the amateur radio club. This activity is highly technical, and it involves six students and two faculty members. But it really involves more than just these eight, because they communicate with people from all over the nation and the world. Radio club is a very serious organization and is strictly governed by the FCC with tests and evaluations of all radio operators. Three students and the two faculty members have their own rigs and call letters.

There is a ladder for progression in expertise. These levels are beginner, novice, technician, general, advanced and extra. Mr. Edge (KA5FDX) holds the rating of advanced, while Coach Davis (WB5 KED) holds the highest rating of extra. In addition to the faculty sponsors, the club consists of extras Bill Raetz (NY 50) and Bryan Mayhan (KA5 THX), general Scott Yakoubian (KA5 KTI), and beginners Matt Koch, Gavin Silaski, and Scott Zimmerman. Junior Bryan Mayhan, who is extremely loyal to the club and to all other operators, said this about the club: "The Radio Club is a winning organization, it could be called an international brotherhood. We're there to help the general public when they are in need of any type of communications assistance."

Every morning as the second bell rings, the prayer usually begins loud and clear over every 19 inch RCA black and white residing within all the classrooms from 101 to 219. Yes, what could start off the morning better, Pop Tarts, Eggos, cold pizza, no, in a word nothing could start off the morning better than our very own television crew. But morning announcements are only part of the overall job of the crew. They are also responsible for broadcasting the monthly homeroom TV shows and other special broadcasts during school. But few people know that the TV crew is there filming the school play as well as every Rocket football game with a play by play commentary by junior Ramon Escobar.

This year the studio will be twenty years old and all the equipment was donated by KTHV Channel 11. Director-Producer of the crew this year is senior Dan Straessle, whose job it is "to make sure everything that needs to be done gets done." When asked about television in general, he quipped, "Television is the most influential form of media in the world today. Without it the world would be lost."

All The Colonel's Men . . . "And Some Of That Routine . . ."

Although most non-ROTC students do not know it, the Catholic High JROTC program is very diverse. The activities range from the collection of food in the community to the practicing of drill on the black-top.

However, the JROTC program is basically designed to teach self-discipline, self-confidence, and leadership skills to help its participants become well-rounded, mature adults.

Cadets engage in community projects such as the collection of food and clothing for the needy and soliciting blood donations for the Red Cross. Public Speaking, hunter education, and map reading are a few of the subjects taught in the classroom.

Cadets gain experience in leadership through the positions they hold in the battalion from assistant squad leader all the way up to battalion commander.

Cadets are in constant competition with each other. They are promoted according to their participation and proficiency in the program as compared to others, and, at the end of each year, a third of the cadets are dropped.

The Catholic High JROTC has a history of being one of the best in the nation. In recent years, the unit has placed second and third in overall performance. Individual groups such as the rifle team and the drill team have also distinguished themselves.

Making Their Presence Known

As well as the many leadership opportunities, there are extra-curricular activities in which dedicated cadets may participate. Talented marksmen can take part in the Rifle team, which practices all year and competes state-wide.

Cadets with musical skills are eligible for the Drum and Bugle Corps, a band that performs at various community and JROTC events during the year.

Those proficient in drill are eligible for the drill team. This proud crew practices year-round and performs elaborate routines for interscholastic competitions, special football games, and PTO meetings.

Others who show exceptional poise and stature are selected for the Color Guard. The Color Guard is widely known for "presenting the Colors" at sports events and for raising and lowering the school's flags each day.

Leading Others To Lead

The main emphasis of the ROTC program is leadership. Over the course of three years, cadets are taught the basics of leadership and given actual experience in this area through positions held in the Battalion. Cadets are given awards for displaying leadership in the community as well as in the ROTC program. "From training in these areas it is hoped that cadets will come out of the program as more competent and confident citizens," said Master Sergeant Schaffer.

When asked how the program has helped him, Battalion Commander Kyle White responded, "It has developed my self-discipline, as well as my leadership and planning abilities."

Greg Eanes' response to this question was, "ROTC has improved my self-confidence by placing me in a leadership position."

Neil Granberry said, "The program has given me an outlook on the Marine Corps in the area of discipline, motivation, and leadership."

A Noteworthy Combination

Band Enhances School Spirit

The fifty-six member C.H.S. band provided much of the backbone for school spirit this year. During football season, the band dazzled the student body with its new repertoire of songs. These songs, which included "Bang a Gong" and the "Theme from Zool: a Space Odyssey", added a special touch to the football excitement.

In late October the band was once again called upon to provide entertainment for a special event, the new building dedication. Living up to its reputation, the band performed magnificently while Bishop McDonald spoke of the school's excellence.

After the last football game the band turned its attention in a new direction, the Concert Band. The music in this band challenged band members and forced them to use every piece of talent they had. The Concert Band spent about four months perfecting just a few musical works, as

"Band members are some of the most dedicated students in the school because they learn their music after school on their own time instead of the school's". - Mr. Pritchett shown by its sound.

The band wouldn't be complete if it didn't have the Jazz Band.

This year the Jazz Band started practicing about two weeks after school began. This band played very complicated music and it took a lot of talent to make it work. The Jazz Band was a favorite among many people and has earned a great deal of respect from professional musicians.

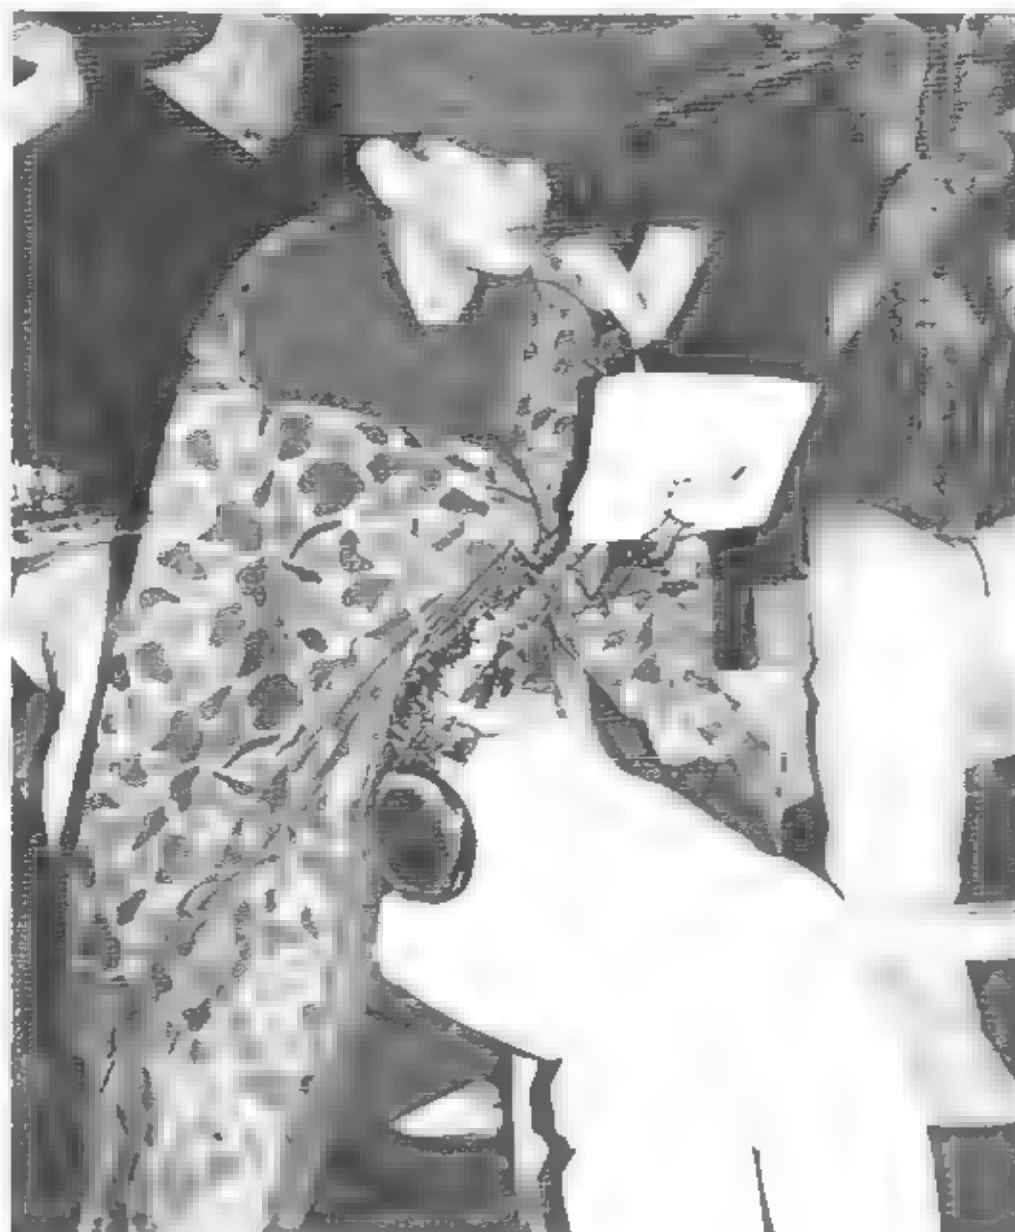

This year an extra dimension was added to band; girls from St. Mary's were allowed in the band. A total of four participated. Lisa Petursson, one of the privileged four, said, "I am really glad to have had the opportunity to play in the CHS band this year. It gave me a chance to meet many interesting guys." This was just one of the many ways the band excelled this year.

Cheerleaders Help To Tie It Up

The cheerleaders of Catholic High differ from the cheerleaders of other schools in that they do not wear skirts or cute little shoes. Instead they are a group of semi-masculine guys who sacrifice their time in order to energize the student body. Few people realize the time and effort it takes to practice for the pep rallies. In addition the cheerleaders are expected to do just that—lead the crowd in cheers at all Rocket football games.

This year's group took for a name, Purple and Gold Assault. Every Friday before a game they wear their sweatshirts that bear the name and symbol of the group. Cheerleader

John Knight says, "PGA is a group of guys whose common goal is to entertain and fire up the student body before games. Yes, we've had our good skits and bad skits, but overall this has been a great year." Being a cheerleader is not all glamour, but it does have its moments, I'm sure.

Stammerings Of Stobaugh

With An Assist By Paul Hart

As the 1985-86 school year overtakes Catholic High, it is once again time to relive the championship athletic programs of the past. The Rockets proved last year that Catholic High is capable of producing many championship caliber teams. This year's athletic programs will not rest on their past performances but will strive to have the most productive year possible.

The football Rockets, just as tough as ever, proved that they could match last year's feat as they captured their first 4-A Central conference title. Spearheaded by their tenacious defense and aided by the potent wishbone offense, the Rockets also won an unprecedented second state title. This incredible accomplishment establishes the football team as the best in the state for the second straight year and provides a tough act for remaining athletic programs to follow.

The basketball team will try to match the football team's performance as they strive to win their first conference title since moving to the new 4-A Central division. As always, Coach Tollet will have his "hoopsters" ready to meet the challenge.

The golf and tennis teams show definite promise to repeat as state champions since the majority of last year's members are returning. The swimming team also looks to claim another state title, and the soccer team definitely has the potential to achieve a championship. This year's physical fitness team also hopes to bring Catholic High athletic prestige as the team travels to Hawaii to compete in a tournament with hopes of gaining a national title.

Alumnus Joe Gray, '81, put it this way, "After years of waiting, we finally made it!"

"The Rockets — just as tough as ever!"

While Looking Back

August 12, 1985. A day that shall live in infamy. This was a day for the future. This was the first day of football practice for the 1985 Rocket football team. It was a day for renewed hope and fiery dreams. Yet it was also an ending. It was an end to last year. It was an end of the people and the memories from the state championship of a year ago. Quarterback Matt Hartnedy remembers: "We had our doubts about the team coming out of off-season practice, so many people were untried, especially me! I was worried about my own responsibilities, much less anyone else's. Two-a-day practices brought us together as a team, I think. We still have no superstars, no heroes—we just have to work together and play as a team and continue toward our goals, first a conference and then a state championship, one game at a time."

It's true! One foot is bigger than the other. P.K. Leonard stretches before he undergoes another hard day's practice.

Anyone who has ever stood in boiling oil and hit himself over the head with an iron hammer understands the pleasures of 2-a-day practices. But the Rockets gladly endure them knowing that they are an ingredient to a championship run high — no member will aspire to less than a state championship. "The seniors work great as a team," exclaimed senior Rick Dworshak. "I feel the '85 Rockets can repeat as AAAA state champions."

The '85 Rockets have set out for the same destination as their '84 counterparts, but they plan to take another route, as senior Mark Tarnowsky explains, "But we're going to do one thing different, (from last year) first, we're going to win the conference, then we'll win the state."

Jonesboro

Quarterback Matt Hartnedy rushed for 122 yards and scored three touchdowns including one from 37 yards out as the Rockets opened up the season with a convincing victory over the sixth-ranked Jonesboro Hurricanes. Despite an evenly played first half, the defending state champions showed what they were made of by scoring 17 unanswered points in the second half. David Hope's touchdown with time running out in the first half gave the Rockets the momentum they needed going into the second half to defeat the Hurricanes.

Conway

The Rockets relied on a flawless performance in the first half and a hard nose defense in the second half to hold off the Conway Wampus Cats in a hard fought battle. Catholic High scored on their first two possessions with touchdowns by David Stobaugh and David Hope. They then turned the game over to the defense, who rose to the occasion. Keith Wortsmith intercepted a pass in the end zone to stop one 'Cat drive. The defense held Conway's outstanding tailback, Tim Horton, to 52 yards rushing.

What was billed as the dream game of the decade in high school football turned out to be a nightmare for the Rockets. A crowd of over 8,000 people looked on as the Rockets, plagued by injuries and penalties, fell to the Northeast Chargers who were led by halfback Juju Harshaw. Matt Hartnedy went down with a separated shoulder early in the game and the reins of the offense were turned over to Todd Archer. ## Bryant

The Rockets fell to the sting of the Bryant Hornets at War Memorial Stadium. Although they dominated the game statistically, the Rocket fumbles added up to a loss. The only Rocket touchdown came in the first quarter with a 6 yard run by Stobaugh. Late in the fourth quarter, with the Rockets behind, sophomore quarterback John Carter completed a 37 yard pass to Mago, but a Hornet interception ended that drive.

McClellan

The Rockets proved their worth in the homecoming game against the McClellan Lions. This was the opening game of the AAAA-Central conference. The first score of the game came from quarterback Todd Archer. In the second half Loeb dove into the end-zone from two yards out. The two point conversion came from Archer pass to James Fitzpatrick. ## Blytheville

The Rockets took advantage of three turnovers to defeat the Blytheville Chickasaws. In the first half Hope and Hartnedy each scored from the three, and Flis went over from the two. Crawford succeeded in two extra point kicks. The only Chickasaw touchdown came before the half. In the third quarter Hope broke loose after an interception. Flis scored the final touchdown.

Rockets Reach Finals

Texarkana

The Rockets moved into the semi-finals by defeating the Texarkana Razorbacks. The Rockets had four touchdowns, one from a pass to Mago, two from Hope, and one from Stobaugh. Two extra points from Crawford and a two-point conversion pass to Mago ended the Rockets' scoring for the game. The outstanding Rocket defense held the Razorbacks to only one touchdown.

Fayetteville

The Rockets braved the weather to defeat the Fayetteville Bulldogs at Harmon Field and advanced to the finals of the AAAA Conference. The only score in the game came from Hartnedy late in the first half. His seven yard run ended an 18 play drive. The extra point from Crawford was good. A penalty ended the only hope for a Bulldog comeback in the final minutes of the game.

AAAA State Two Years Straight!

FS Northside

After the smoke had cleared at War Memorial Stadium the Rockets had won their second straight AAAA State championship! The first 48 minutes of regulation play was a defensive struggle. Each team scored only once, both of which came off the opposition's miscues. The Rockets scored early in the second quarter after Jody Lensing recovered a Grizzly fumble. Nine plays later Hope carried the ball in from the one to give the Rockets the lead. The Rockets led until the end of the game when Northside converted an interception into a 7-7 tie.

Then the offense took over. In the first overtime, the Rockets scored when Hartnedy fired his first of 3 touchdown passes when he found Tommy Covington open in the end zone. The Grizzlies came right back and tied the game on their third play from scrimmage.

In the second overtime Northside scored after a roughing-the-kicker penalty gave them the ball at the one yard line. The Rockets sent the game into a third overtime when Hartnedy hit Jamie Mago in the corner of the end zone. Neither team scored in the third overtime. On fourth down, Hartnedy was stopped on the one yard line, but a penalty on the play gave Northside the ball on the five. They immediately tried a field goal, but the kick sailed wide to the right.

In the fourth overtime Northside scored first. The Rockets scored on their first play from scrimmage when David Hope scored on a 10 yard run.

The Rockets prevailed in the fifth overtime when Hartnedy connected with Mago for a 7 yard touchdown pass. Paul Crawford's fifth straight extra point provided the final margin as the determined Rocket defense finally stopped the Grizzlies.

The game took two and a half hours and five overtimes to complete. The crowd of 5,200 saw the Rockets win their second straight championship in perhaps the most exciting Arkansas high school football game in history.

The Rockets began the season with hopes of returning to the playoffs. This year's squad had to turn to the seniors for leadership. They found it in three year starter Andy Ward. Ward consistently scored in double figures, and he was strong in rebounding.

Another force in the middle was senior Andy Dunn. 6'5" senior Mark Phillips provided the team with outstanding leadership.

But the team also consisted of many younger players. Junior Michael Hinchey commanded the offense at the point guard position. Junior Mat Stewart also was a force in the Rocket offense. The key for the Rockets is sophomore Anthony Green.

The Rockets began the season in spectacular fashion. They finished up the non-conference play with a 11-4 record and had the much needed momentum going into conference action. The Rockets fell just short of defeating cross town rival Hall in the Warrior's own gym. After that the Rockets had trouble playing consistently due to injuries and illnesses, and fell short of making the playoffs. Despite the problems that this year plagued the Rockets, the team finished with a 14-11 record.

A New Coach

Coach Randy Rutherford, graduate of the Class of 1980, returned to his Alma Mater in 1985 to take on his first job as a basketball coach. Rutherford was an excellent player himself. In 1980, Rutherford's senior year, the Rockets captured the AAAA Championship. But his most memorable experience as a Rocket occurred during his sophomore year. Rutherford sank the game-winning shot against then number one ranked Hall

Now as a coach Rutherford has new responsibilities. He must find young players with "good fundamentals-such as dribbling, shooting, and passing," and mold them into star players. To mold the freshmen into great players, he "introduces them to the Catholic High system and teaches them the importance of teamwork and a winning attitude.

His long-term goal for the team is to "develop a winning and well respected program that is consistent year in and year out."

Against all odds, Andy Ward looks for a way to escape from the three defenders.

International Aid

This year the Rocket basketball team had a very special addition to the squad. Detlef Schneider, our own foreign exchange student from West Germany, proved to be a valuable asset.

Detlef came to the U.S. as an experienced basketball player. He was a member of the Bavarian State team which placed fourth in the German National championship. When Detlef returns to Germany, he will still have two years of school left. He then plans to join a professional basketball club.

Recently the West German team placed fifth in European competition. This team recruits many players who have learned to play basketball in the U.S. German rules differ slightly, for example, in Germany the team has a 30 second shot clock, a jumpball rule, and traveling violations are more strictly enforced.

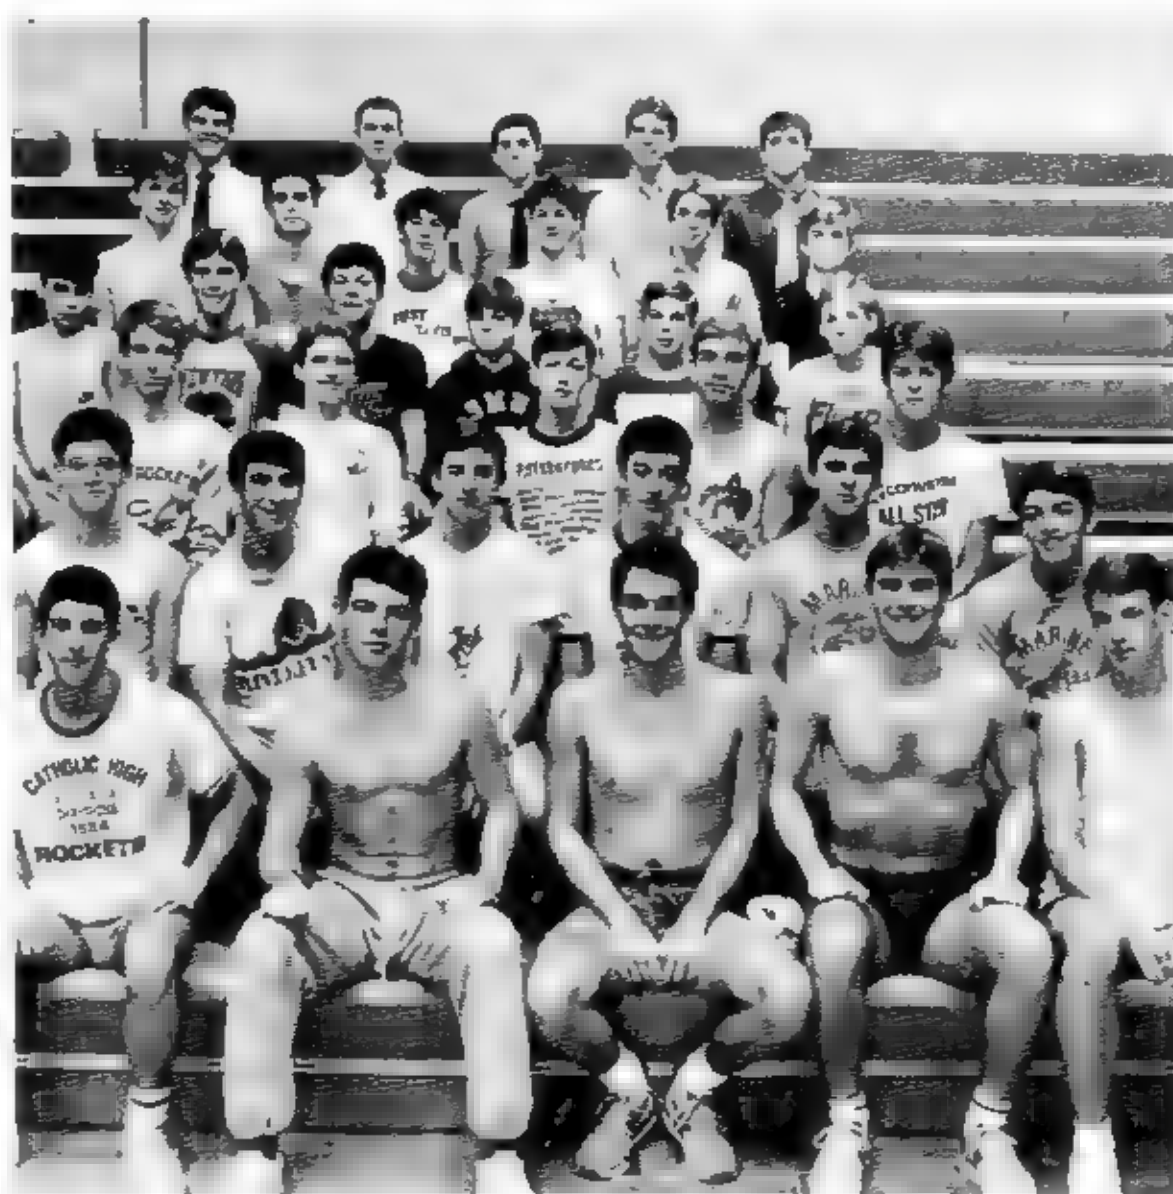

Finally Detlef stated that there aren't so many basketball fans in Germany. But he said that there are about 1000 fans per game who cheer almost as well as the Catholic High fans.

Still Enduring, Working To Improve

Pain! A thing which most people try to avoid desperately, but some students put themselves through willingly. Well, almost willingly! These are the students on the physical fitness team. By putting himself through this, the student tries to better himself physically, and if he is able, he tries to earn a spot on the team which goes to national competition.

Our national squad went to Camp Pendleton, Calif., and competed in the five event test (sit-ups, push-ups, pull-ups, broad jump, run.) The squad did very well as a team, finishing second in the nation, and as individuals. Danny Wagner placed third in the individual competition.

Because only fourth period is allotted to it, the program uses little school time. Rather, the student has to work on his own, and he must have the proper attitude. Robert Boswell, a team co-captain, said, "It is the attitude that counts. Some people are born with better physical ability than others, but if a student has the right attitude and works to better himself, then the physical fitness team is doing him some good."

The daily workouts are a difficult thing to go through. Luckily each squad has its own managers which keep the students going when they feel like giving up.

Whether working out for nationals or just for yourself doesn't matter. The program can take a student as far as he is willing to take himself.

Soccer

Swimming And Diving

Soccer has become a successful program in the Catholic High athletic department. The tryouts began early in February in a frigid 20 degrees with 50 athletes competing for a slot on the 18 man squad.

These men were led by senior lettermen Kevin Hughes, Jason Massie, Scott Scherer, and Paul Crawford. The team was also made up a talented group of underclassmen.

The competition in the City League was tough, but the Rockets' determination proved them victors. Now the season is over, but the dreams of another year's competition will always be present in the minds of these Catholic High Soccer players.

Catholic High's swimming and diving team and exceptional talent this year. The 1986 team, which followed the successful 1985 team, promised to reach for the top also. The team members under the guidance of Coach Heien practiced year round, including grueling early morning workouts.

The team competed in several meets, and performed well in them all. Martin Finley, Catholic's star diver, once again had a record breaking season. Eventhough he is a junior, Finley is already receiving major attention from colleges. With excellent swimmers like sophomore Eric Gattini, the swimming team indeed has a bright future.

Dedicated Champions

Tennis

The 1986 tennis team had another exceptional year. They began this year hoping to follow in the footsteps of last year's successful team and capture consecutive state championships. Paul Hart and John Verlenden headed the team along with Robert Knapp and Cary Rosenbaum.

The team advanced to the AAAA state tourney held in Hot Springs and continued Catholic's tradition of champions.

Golf

Continuing the drive of excellence in the Catholic High athletic department was the 1986 golf team. Warren Overton, winner of last year's state title for individual competition, often proved decisive in Rocket victories with scores in the low seventies. The key to the team's success was every day practices after school until dark.

The future of the Rocket golf team looks bright because of sophomore superstar Chris Jenkins.

Another Side Of The Family

Madonna and Kool and the Gang were right, It's time to celebrate! 1985-86 was definitely a year of celebration. Having a good time is just a part of being at Catholic High. It is one of the ties between us, a sense of belonging we acquire by nature.

These exciting moments make the best memories of high school, and scenes such as these will flash in our minds for years to come. The images of state championships and prom nights will remain long after history and algebra have vanished.

PHASES OF

Seniors' Analysis Of The

Stereotypes - patterns of behavior associated with a certain group of people. Like it or not, stereotypes for various people haunt the halls of Catholic High. There are the brains, the jocks, the ROTC cadets, the studs, the geeks, the rednecks, the Southwest City boys, and the Dogtown Dudes. The major classifications are, of course, freshmen, sophomores, juniors and seniors. The stereotype set for each class cuts too deeply for students to break.

Freshmen have a definite disadvantage because of their newness to high school and their lack of size and influence. The arrogance of the upperclassmen determines the freshman stereotype more than their own actions do. Freshmen are pictured as naive, clumsy, and squealy, with clothes to match. Freshmen may experience a growth spurt, making their pants too short and giving them the "flood water" effect. Clip-on ties and a shirt picked out by Mom complete the image's wardrobe. This image directs prejudice against freshmen whether they deserve it or not.

Sophomores, on the other hand, fully merit their stereotype. They are obnoxious, rude, and boisterous. Their greatest pleasure comes from bullying each other and the freshmen, and their hobbies include partying, goofing off, partying, cruising, partying, crashing out, and partying. Their clothes are as careless as their attitude - sloppy and ragged.

DEVELOPMENT

Four Stereotypes Of Students

Some students mellow during the junior year and start realizing the importance of high school. Others, however, continue the sophomore standard and maintain immaturity. Juniors get their first taste of power and use it to their advantage. They experience freedom, being able to drive and stay out more. Their ego inflates as they realize their movement towards the ultimate phase of high school, the senior year.

Seniors rank as the elite of the school, having already suffered through the earlier stages. By their jackets and sharp attire they are more visible than other students. A senior simply flashes his ring to achieve command over the underclassmen around him. With three years experience behind them they display sophistication and the ultimate cool. They tolerate the inferior grades because they realize that the time of maturity will eventually come to everyone. But the supremacy of seniors is short lived, for the cycle repeats in college.

Unidentified representatives from each of the four classes agreed to pose for these shots. Can you tell the grade level of each of the students? Hint: the one wearing the tuxedo is a member of a class beginning with "s" and is not a sophomore.

(John Knight, John Quarti, Mike Murtha, and John Doubleday).

A DAY IN THE LIFE OF A TIE

Ties are the most helpful articles of clothing. From 8:29 to 3:31 and beyond, ties are used, misused, and abused to the max. Although ties are supposed to represent maturity and sophistication, they more often end up as objects of aggression and anxiety. They are convenient toys, napkins, handkerchiefs, and even weapons. Let's follow the tie of sophomore Mike Balenko and study its daily torture.

1. 8:20 AM - Tie dangles from window as Mike arrives at school.
2. 8:29 AM - Before homeroom, Mike furiously wraps the tie into some semblance of a knot.
3. 12:00 PM - Mike uses the tie to wipe globs of Ma Butler's yummy gravy off his chin.
4. 1:00 PM - During a major geometry exam, Mike eases the tension by chewing on his tie.
5. 3:35 PM - After a long day, Mike takes out his aggressions with a rousing tie fight.

From A to Z, Tim Lamb, Michael Hinchey, and Robbie Boswell demonstrate the full spectrum of students at Catholic High. The avant-garde style, the laid-back informal look, and the smart preppy appearance mingled this year, as in years past

ALL TIED

VeeP Speaks

Catholic High students are all different. We come from diverse backgrounds, various neighborhoods, and even different cities and countries.

Although we are different, we're alike — alike in the sense that we are members of the "family" at Catholic High. We aren't linked by bloodlines but by shared, sometimes hard learned, experiences. Our friendships are greater than those normal friendships found in other schools.

Here we have a great feeling of spirit and togetherness. Students may have differences and talk about each other, but all conflict vanishes when someone else tries to attack one of ours!

Catholic High has a very strict code of discipline. When we get in trouble for not wearing belts or socks or for not having our ties pulled all the way up, we complain. This "discipline" teaches us humility and to become better men.

Since our school isn't co-ed, we can talk about almost anything in class. Teachers express themselves to the fullest without embarrassing anyone. We learn more about life in general, and our true personalities come through. We stay so busy we have little free time to think about girls.

Catholic High has about 800 students. Many more want to go here but aren't accepted. This is the finest school I know, and I am proud to have been a part of it. Catholic High taught me a lot about myself and growing up. The Catholic High Experience is awesome! I love this school and everything it stands for. Thank you all for accepting me and making me feel a part of the family. -Jay Van Dover

The End Of An Era

The Long Farewell

A feverish energy swept the class. More and more activities squeezed into fewer and fewer days. Seniors frantically scurried about, hurrying, for a startling realization had dawned upon them: time had run out.

A fairly normal level of activity started the year. Nine months still smiled benevolently upon the seniors and lulled them into a false confidence of the considerable distance of the end of their high school days. The summer still lingered in memory; good grief, the heat alone awaited until October to subside. All this combined to numb students enough to put off many anticipated activities.

Not until the football season began winding down, late as it did, did an inkling of the dwindling time enter the minds of the seniors. Then, a bittersweet recognition of the final game undermined even the excitement of the Championship game. The last game had come and gone.

After that the year really picked up speed. Graduation plans — cap and gown orders, invitations — harassed the seniors, reminding them of the imminent end. The time for flying the nest had approached.

Curses!

Senioritis Strikes

The school is plagued with diseases. These afflictions are far worse and more contagious than any other known to medical science. What are the names of these four dastardly maladies? Try freshmanitis, sophomoreitis, junioritis, and senioritis.

Senioritis is perhaps the most deforming of the quartet. Infection usually starts late in the junior year when students await a wild summer and year ahead. Spreading rapidly from student to student, senioritis can cripple its victims with an escape from reality. Symptoms of Phase I include impatience and irritability, coupled with a mild case of aloofness. Victims perceive that they are in total control of the school and underclassmen.

Phase II begins during the second semester of the final year, when seniors foresee the end of their high school career. As graduation approaches, they drift deeper and deeper into a state of apathy. Flashbacks of previous years pop into their heads, and they begin to envy the same underclassmen whom they had scorned only months before. After graduation, they experience a strange nostalgia for the institution which they had perhaps abhorred for brief instances during their tenure. Although most symptoms vanish with time, senioritis leaves scars that last forever. Everlasting remnants of the disease remind the victims of this powerful segment of their lives and what an outstanding influence the school has had on their identity.

Last Words . . .

The friendships and experiences I have had have made these the greatest four years of my life. It's scary to think where my life might be if it weren't for Catholic High.

Mike Binz

The senior year simply flies by. It's really sad to realize that we are doing some things for the last time.

Ricky Marendt

I'll never forget the new people that I met; they have really made my AFS experience so useful. God bless the USA.

Miguel Landa

The four years at Catholic have passed so quickly that it's almost impossible to believe. The great football seasons and the wonderful friendships will always be remembered fondly.

Fran McDonald

It's about time.

JUNIORS

Class

Always In Session

The juniors of this school year had a style unrivaled by any other class. This unique flair was present in any event in which juniors participated. Of course, there were spectacular efforts by individuals such as Dominic Flis, recruited as early as his sophomore year for his outstanding performance on the football field; Paul Hart displayed his outstanding skills on the tennis court; Warren Overton competed all over the country in search of a spot on the PGA; Martin Finley claimed the state diving title. In academics, John Moran obtained a grade point average of 97.7 and Eric Fetner trailed him by only .04 of a percent. Also, it was the actions and abilities of all other juniors combined that gave their class that special "classy" distinction. Be it a pep rally, singing at school mass, ROTC activity, or any other happening, juniors always displayed their flair and enthusiasm.

NO doze

Although not particular to the junior class, sleeping in class is a big problem for many juniors. When it's late in the day and the class is a dull one, it's hard to keep from dozing off once and awhile. It isn't unusual to see heads bob.

Although all classes are possible naptimes, some classes seem to lend themselves more easily to sleep than others. These include U.S. History, chemistry and Algebra II. If a student is already tired when he arrives at his class, a normally placid fifty minutes can turn into a nightmare of terror. The battle to stay fully conscious is usually long and hard fought, but inevitably futile. Nothing short of standing in the back of the room or dodging erasers will keep guys awake.

Is this the Twilight Zone? What are all these Catholic High boys doing sleeping in class? We know students, especially juniors, wouldn't do such a thing.

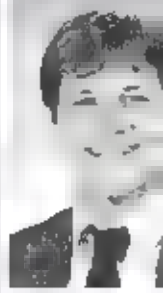

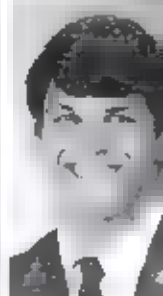

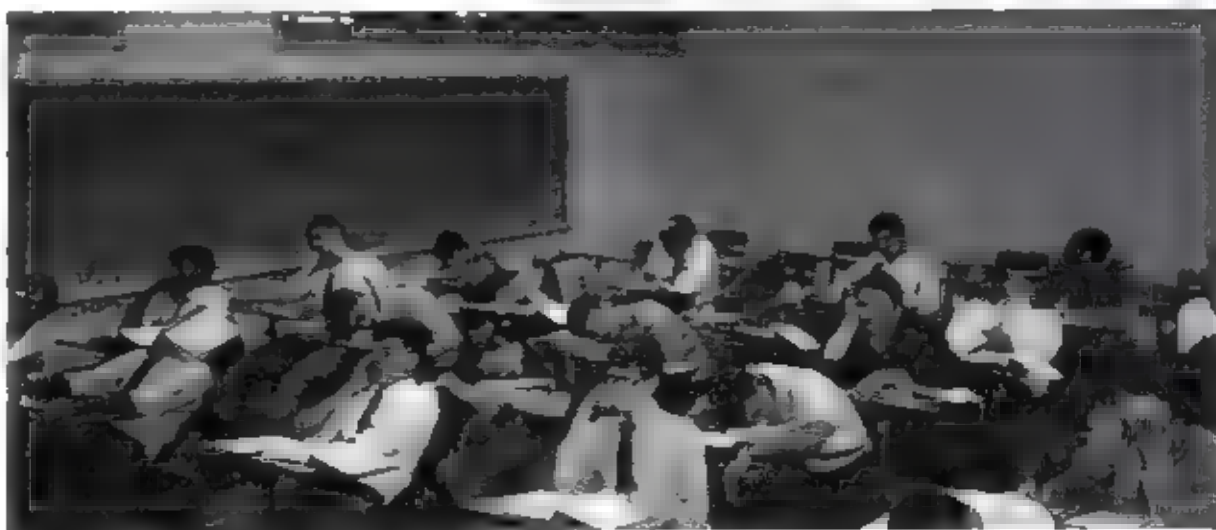

What is the oxidation state of indium in the halide melt? Hmm, maybe  $E=mc^2$ . Jeff Goebel takes a chemistry test.

Students Fight The Urge

The reasons for this unusual problem are greatly varied. They include: "I had to work last night;" "I had a rough weekend." Teachers seem to scoff at these excuses because they hardly ever let the students go back to sleep.

Practicing the nose method of restful sleeping? Robert Heck, as well as a few other juniors, nod off during class.

Bird Team Returns From Egg-stinction

Pride. Excellence. Tradition. These are the virtues our forefathers intended us to have when they founded a new nation. The Catholic High Bird Watching Team has carried over these virtues into a new dimension of sport.

In 1957, the Bird Watching Team was put into extinction because of vandalism caused by the continued rivalry with LR Central. In 1985, the tradition returned.

The season was rough. The team dedicated themselves to win the state championship. It began June 12, with an unheard of three practices a day, a true sign of commitment to excellence. It ended with the achievement of success. The team won the "Bird-O-Rama," defeating Oak Grove, 50-14, to take the state championship.

The players comment on their victorious season:

Jim "J.I." Tarvin, Coach: "I would have crawled here from anywhere to take the coaching position. The fans are great"

John Vratsinas, Co-Captain: "Undescribable. Our greatest accomplishment was the establishment of our training camp in Birdtown, north of Conway."

Ethan Schock, Co-Captain: "I would give up my life for this team. That day in Wabbaseka proved it."

Chris Brucks, Foreign Correspondent, fluent in 12 languages: "Scibotilum taziedaga stohajech cabalatetezazum! That day in the fields of Greenville was a living hell."

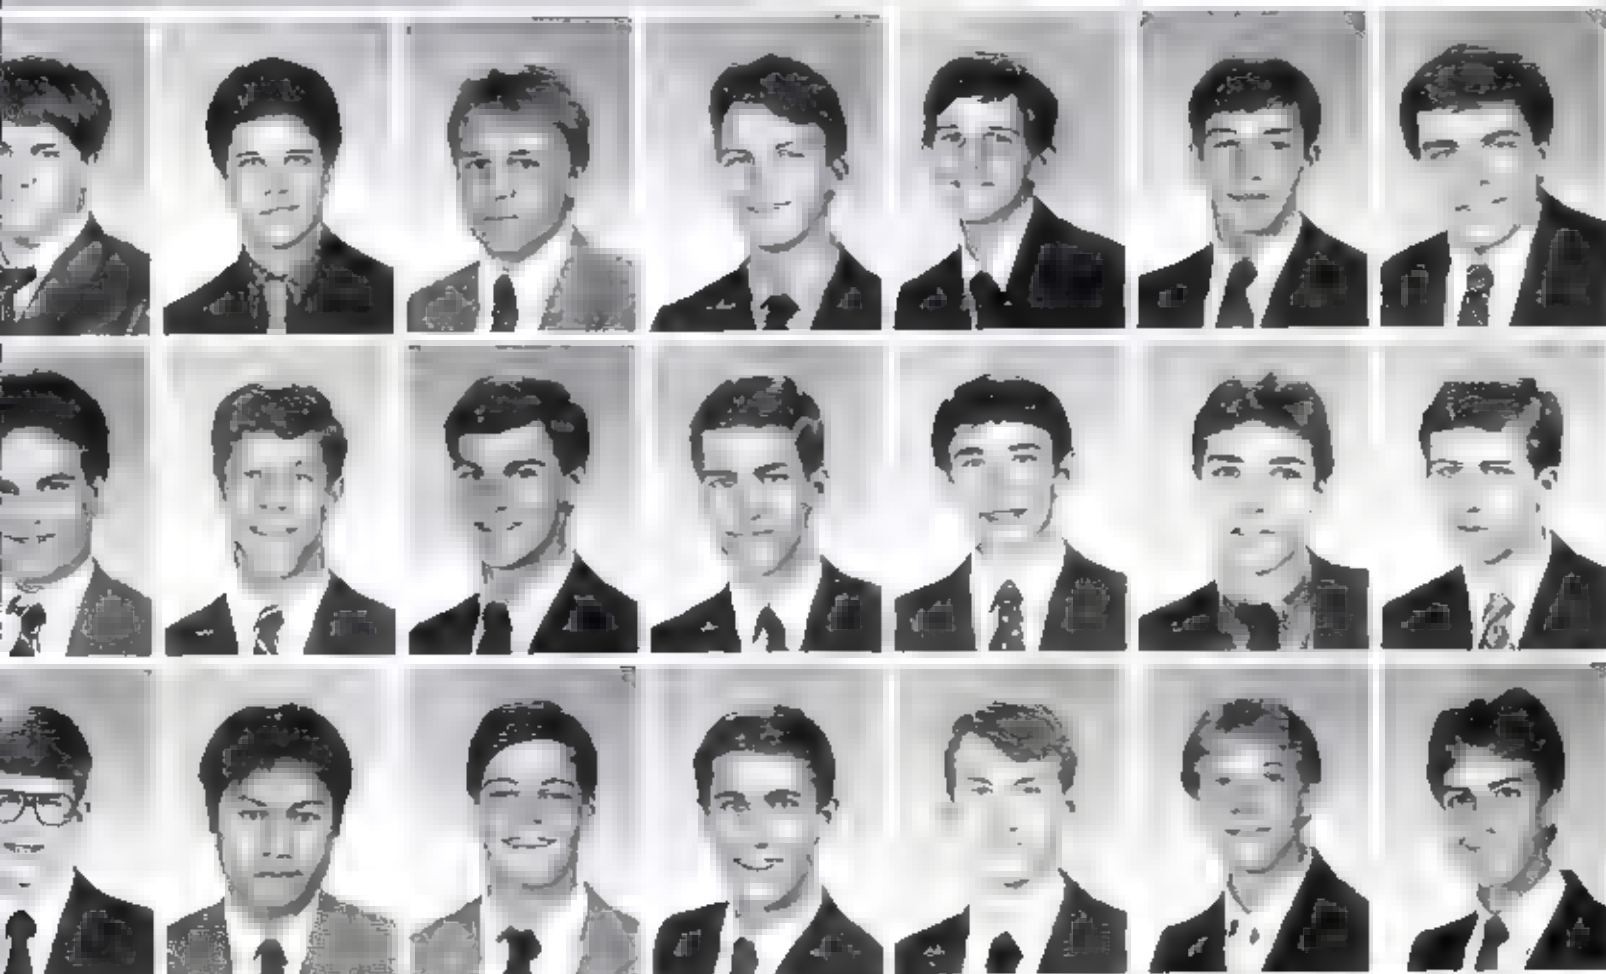

Mike Beranek, Public Relations: "This year's team was made possible by a grant from the Audubon Society. Thanks to PBS, ch 2, for providing game films and special tournament coverage."

Trey Davis, Social Director: "Everyone should watch birds because we evolved from them. My most memorable match was when I spotted a Blue Wallopoppus egg to help defeat DeWitt."

Matthew Dishongh, Manager: "We have a rendezvous with destiny."

No we're not birds, we're c-r-a-z-y Bird team members Ethan Schock, John Vratsinas, Steve Wujek, Matthew Dishongh, Michael Boyd, Trey Davis, and Jon Vines goof off

Yes, we're just "good ole boys." Juniors Mark Harrill, Jeff Goebel, Craig May, and Fletcher Clement eat their lunches outside.

Supremacy? No one's better than we juniors!

The Penultimate Year

In case you're wondering, penultimate means "next to the last." That's the situation juniors find themselves in, with only one year left. On that first day in August of 1983, four years seemed an eternity, but that didn't last long. The years went by too quickly for many, in terms of good times, some might say it crawled by in terms of labor. Whatever the experience, the end is too near.

"What else can you expect?" Michael Parker anticipates next year.

Why Be A Sophomore?

The Class Of 1988 Speaks Out

After struggling through their first year at Catholic High, many freshmen ask themselves if their labors were in vain. Will the sophomore year have advantages above those of the freshman year.

Besides having a year of experience and knowledge of the intricate workings of the school, sophomores boast several benefits that are denied to the freshmen. According to Jeff Dumboski, the greatest advantage of being a sophomore is, "Having a study hall." Declan Fitzpatrick said, "There is much more school spirit, and you feel more a part of the school." "Your input finally counts in school elections," was the remark of Mike Balenko. Michael Tanner simply said, "No Time Magazine."

But in addition to the privileges that these sophomores mentioned, there are deeper, more personal reasons why the sophomore year is better than the freshman year. Phillip Kerr expressed these reasons best when he said that the greatest advantage of being a sophomore is, "I'm not a freshman anymore." Chris Blackmon added to this by saying, "You get to pick on the freshmen."

The sophomore year of high school has a great reputation of being the year in which students finally become adjusted to their school. Moreover, many upper-classmen revere the tenth grade as the best year of their high school life, but Bill Leheny disagrees by saying, "There are no advantages of being a sophomore." It will ultimately be up to next year's juniors to decide what the advantages actually were.

Honorable Students

Dedicated students work long hours to train their minds just as athletes exercise to build their bodies; however, the records of the athlete often overshadow the accomplishments of the student. The honor roll is one of the ways that students are recognized for their talent. "It is a goal to reach that justifies the hours of study needed" said Steve Skretkowicz.

At Catholic High the standards for the honor roll include both academic excellence and classroom conduct scores. To be recognized, one must have at least one "A" and no grade lower than a "B". The conduct grade must be a 2 or above.

With requirements that are as difficult as these, one might think that only a few students would ever be on the honor roll, but in the class of 1988, almost 20 percent of the entire class has fulfilled these requirements.

Of the thirty seven sophomores on the honor roll, twelve had straight "A's" at the beginning of the year. They were Ted Eades, Clark Elms, Chris Fleischmann, Chris Guarriello, Jason Hicks, David Kwee, Bill Leheny, Charles Owen, Tim Reynolds, Tim Richardson, Steve Skretkowicz, and Shawn Smith.

The honor roll is an excellent goal for all students to try to achieve, but they should remember that all students need a balance between school and other interests as well.

Sophomore Misconceptions

Wait a Second! Bill Leheny, alias yearbook photographer, says, "I'm supposed to take the pictures!"

Of all the classes at Catholic High, the sophomore class always has the worst reputation. For reasons yet unexplained, each year there are rumors circulating in the school about the tenth grade. However, these malicious statements are simply misunderstandings on the part of the rest of the school.

"Sophomores are obnoxious. They think that they are always right," says senior Mark Rechtin. These are the two most common misconceptions about the sophomores. Other students mistake the relaxed attitude of the sophomores for being obnoxious. In fact the sophomores believe that they deserve a year of rest after their difficult freshman year.

"Sophomores don't care about the future or their long-term goals. They live only for the present," is the remark of Brian Snider. Again the attitude of the tenth graders has been mistaken. With two years left in their high school career, their goals may not be well defined, so therefore, they cannot easily prepare for their life after graduation.

Because they are the most misunderstood class of the school, they are united throughout the year. This feeling of unity continues through the year and the rest of their high school life.

At Last 16!

What Will The World Come To?

There is a unique phenomenon every year at Catholic High. In the beginning of the school year, there are many available parking spaces. Towards the end, however, the spaces disappear. Why? Sophomores are turning sixteen!

When a sophomore turns sixteen, it is a date which he has longed for many years. Finally he has WHEELS! This is great. As Saul Rousseau says, "Mom isn't taking me around anymore."

The car provides "mobility" and creates a certain degree of independence. Greater independence breeds more responsibility.

The driver has a responsibility to not injure other drivers, passengers, pedestrians, etc. Many sophomores have to buy their own insurance. Paying the premiums can be hard, so many sophomores obtain jobs. This also provides a certain degree of independence.

Many different cars are driven by sophomores. They range from luxury sedans to sports cars. One thing is for sure. When it is Friday at 3:30, there is nothing like getting in a car, cranking up the radio, and looking forward to the weekend.

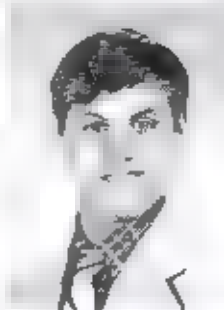

Cars. Cars. Cars ... Before the end of school, many sophomores begin driving causing many parking problems and jams

Welcoming The New Guys

What's Really In Those Stuff Sacks?

"They're small." D. Hardberger

Every year a new crowd of strangers appears at Catholic High. No one really knows who they are, but they are collectively known as the freshmen class.

Being the youngest class, the freshmen are often ridiculed and teased by older students. This comes primarily from a few distinguishing factors. Derek Hardberger, a rather tall senior, summing up the most obvious difference about freshmen, stated, "They're small." Another distinguishing trait is the wearing of out of style "clip-ons," donned by those freshmen who are not yet experienced in the art of tying full length ties. Another stereotypical freshman quality is the carrying of huge bags in which are placed all of their school books, their lunch, every toy from home, and countless millions of other mysterious objects. An accumulation of these "stuff sacks" in the aisles of a classroom marks it as a freshman classroom. "They're huge. It's not possible to walk up and down the aisles. I take off points every time I trip over one," said Mr. Tarvin.

The upper classes may harass the freshmen, but only because they received the same treatment when they were freshmen. Stephen Lohr said it best, "They're still experiencing the traditions of the school; they're still learning and earning their pride." Thankfully, it doesn't take them long to understand and realize that these students are, in actuality, their brothers.

Friends As Brothers

"A freshman at Catholic also experiences togetherness" — William Fletcher

With 200 guys packed in a school without any girls, certain special friendships are going to grow and develop. But in a school of four separate classes and numerous other divisions, another sentiment manifests itself as well. This feeling is the tie of brotherhood, and it plays a vital role in the everyday life of Catholic High students.

Even little actions, such as waiting for someone to pass in front of them into a classroom, perfectly exemplifies brotherhood. Other students show this quality by excusing themselves after hallway collisions. Students commonly help one another with study and homework. For car trouble, a fellow student always appears with offers of battery cables and push-starts. Freshmen find help early in the year when they have trouble opening their lockers or finding their way to class. However, the greatest feelings of brotherhood come from school spirit and class unity, when students realize, "Hey, we're a family!"

This year Catholic High welcomed new students, but one in particular stands out. Michael Stotlar is confined to a wheelchair and needs help from other students during the school day. His classmate, David Straessle spends a great deal of time and effort assisting him, while other students help Mike get up and down the stairs. These boys really learn what the spirit of Catholic High encompasses. Spontaneous and on-the-spot friendship — that is what helps make Catholic High what it is.

"Enter The Tribon Way" A Year Of Change

The freshman class has faced a great deal of adversity since graduating from junior high and entering Catholic High School. No longer are they the head of their grade schools, but they must now begin a new lifestyle which involves meeting new teachers and friends. The freshman class has undergone many changes this year and has been exposed to a totally different environment since enrolling at Catholic.

Not only has the class of 1989 had to deal with much stricter rules than in grade school, such as the wearing of ties and maintaining a short haircut, but they have also had to cope with the reality of not seeing girls until the weekend. This single factor develops the sense of brotherhood among the students and is an important cause for the drastic change in the freshmen's lives. Another major difference for students entering Catholic is the change in atmosphere from their grade school. Instead of being at the top of their various grade schools, they are now considered mere freshmen. This has been the greatest change they have undergone since beginning the ninth grade.

Despite all the changes the freshmen have suffered through the course of the year, they have developed a feeling of brotherhood towards each other and have become part of the Catholic High family. They have become excellent representatives of Catholic High and will carry on the school's proud tradition.

In The Beginning

From Childhood To Adolescence

For Catholic High to continue its standard of academic excellence, one would point to the quality and devotion of the school's teachers and staff. Yet one important factor must surely not be forgotten: the students. Without students Catholic High would not be much of a school at all. And the place where the majority of Catholic High students start their secondary school careers is in the freshman class at Catholic High.

After being 'welcomed' to school by the other classes, the freshmen begin their personal adventures of high school life. They make new friends, study new subjects, and become accustomed to a new way of life. It doesn't take long before the new students begin to understand and integrate into the Catholic High mainstream.

Once the students become associated with the school, they can begin to take advantage of what it has to offer, from academics to athletics. And with two recent Rhodes scholars and two consecutive football state championships, Catholic High surely has a lot to offer in both fields as well as in others. The school's high standards demand that the students learn discipline early on. This virtue will help the student throughout his life.

The students' experiences at Catholic certainly form them into respectable young men, as well as capable and mature adults. It is this epitome of the Catholic High student which the school has become accustomed to turning out. Although these young students may not realize it, they are constantly being molded and formed for their futures in society. Their high school years might be difficult, but without them the students simply would not be complete.

Phenomenal Faculty

The Brains Behind the Boys

The Catholic High faculty is among the best in the state. They are men and women who enjoy their work and are loyal to their school. Very few schools have as many alumni returning to teach, and there is a distinct camaraderie between all the teachers at Catholic High. In addition to working together, they are also involved in activities after school. The S.H.A.R.C.S. and the Friday afternoon golfing buddies bring out the superb athletes of the faculty, and the seasonal holiday parties allow all the teachers to get together and have some good, clean fun.

In addition to their duties during school hours, many teachers spend an extraordinary amount of extra time supervising activities. Sometimes these duties may carry over into their personal time, but they make these sacrifices gladly for the students.

This year Catholic High lost one very special teacher. Mrs. Schichtl resigned her position as head of the Business Department because of her ailing mother. She dedicated eighteen years to the students, and her presence will be missed by all those she taught. Her replacement this year was Mrs. Knowlton who took Mrs. Schichtl's classes at the end of the first nine weeks. Mrs. Knowlton was a fine replacement for Mrs. Schichtl.

Many of the teachers have families of their own to care for, but they are always there to help individual students in need. They care as much for their Catholic High family as their own.

An Inner View Of Mr. Moran

The Truth Behind the Dice

Perhaps many students wonder what exactly makes a teacher tick. Mr. Moran, a teacher for eighteen years, has given the ROCKET some of his observations after years of teaching.

When asked about student motivation, he said, "I feel one person cannot motivate another to do anything. A teacher can only provide the conditions for motivation because people are too diverse to be motivated in the same way. It would be presumptuous for me to assume that I could make a student learn, because everyone has a different reason for studying."

His dreaded dice were used to reward or penalize a student's preparations for class. When the dice are rolled, one die represents the row and the other die represents the seat. He then proceeds to ask that student questions. The dice became a fixture of his Latin classes because he felt that in order to learn Latin it must be studied daily, and that was his way of checking up on progress. If a student did not study, then he risked getting "blitzed by the dice."

Throughout his many years at Catholic High, Mr. Moran has had a variety of teaching assignments. He tells of the time he taught a class of the lower thirty seniors. He allowed them to work at their own pace. Some worked on carburetor repair, others on a newspaper, and some others produced their own radio show. Teaching the bright students has its advantages and disadvantages as well. Bright students are bright when they come; the faculty does not make them smart. The struggling students are a challenge to teach. They give teaching a different dimension, and that is what teaching is all about.

The least we could do for a great teacher. Dan Stobaugh presents a silver platter to Mrs. Schiobach on behalf of the student body.

Outstanding Examples of Our Community's Young People.

We're proud to introduce your school's members of Twin City Bank's Student Board of Directors. Each member is chosen as an outstanding example of our community's young people. They were selected on the basis of leadership, enthusiasm, academic excellence and integrity.

Their keen insight into the needs of today's young people allows Twin City Bank to offer better services to the youth of our community. Their service on our Student Board introduces them to the world of business and helps develop better citizens.

Twin City Bank helping youth serve our community. Youth helping TCB better serve our community.

Committed to provide the Best for the Youth of our Community

DADDY, MOMMA,
JOHNNY, JOE, JUDY,
SUSIE, AND BETSIE

Look up my son and raise your eyes,
There is a rainbow in the skies,
And you must follow with hope so high,
And never let today's dream die.

You were our athletic boy,
In your games you gave us joy,
With the punches you did roll,
Strong in body - strong in soul.

Every school day in the fall,
Came games and practice of football,
Shooting baskets with your friends,
For you the season did not end.

Long hot hours on the court,
When tennis was your favorite sport,
The prize for physical fitness champ,
The fun you had at basketball camp.

The times you ran the Pepsi race,
and twice in art you won first place,
Hard hours at McDonald's working,
Late nights closing, weekends opening.

Remember all those Halloween capers
With shaving cream and toilet paper?
When Pac Man at the Yellow Rocket
Got the quarters from your pocket?

The week in Memphis on Spring Break,
The times you kept your mom awake,
So many nights you stayed out late,
The morning of the crushed Buick.

Now comes your Graduation Day,
And soon you will be on your way,
Another rocket launched in space,
Exploring till you find your place.

If you work and keep your faith,
The rainbow's end will be your fate,
Like good King Edward, the saint of old,
You will find your "pot of gold."
The treasure in it can't be sold,
Cause you can't buy that kind of gold.

Dear David:

We've always loved you because you were our first miracle. You were the genesis of a marriage and the fulfillment of young love.

You sustained us through the hamburger years, that first apartment (furnished in early poverty), the first mode of transportation (VW and 1948 feet), and the 7-inch TV we paid on for 36 months.

You were new, had unused parents and enough clothes for triplets and enough aunts and uncles for eight children. You were the original model of un-tried parents. You got the strained beef, open safety pins, cloth diapers and three-hour naps.

You were the beginning. And now you have a beginning of your own. We wish you joy and wisdom. All the doors are open to you - do not close one until you have explored it.

Love, Mother, Dad, and Scot

HOW TO GIVE YOUR NEWBORN CHILD A 4-YEAR COLLEGE EDUCATION FOR $8000.

INCREDIBLE, BUT TRUE.

Give your newborn child the gift that he or she will remember forever: a 4-year higher education.

You can do it through the "magic" of tax-free zero coupon municipal bonds.

Give a gift of $2000 a year for the next four years in zero munis compounding tax-free at 10.25% interest semi-annually. And by the time your child turns 18, he/she should have $12,000 a year for the 4-year college of their choice.

To learn more about zero munis call today.

And together, let's put minds over money.

Luck of the Irish with you! Jim Kordsmeier practices his Irish dialects for the lead role Finian.

You tell'm, Chic. The Sheriff (Bart Baskette) threatens to evict poor sharecroppers while Henry (Michael Boyd) distracts in the background.

Thesbians Show Their Irish

Lights, camera, action! Theater is alive! In the tradition of fine musical productions, Catholic High and Mt. St. Mary's jointly staged Finian's Rainbow, a tale of gold and Irish Magic in the late 1940's American South. 26 Mt. St. Mary's students teamed up with 32 CHS students in this successful rendition.

Finian (Jim Kordsmeier) and Sharon McLonergan (Liz O'Donnell) immigrate from Ireland to fulfill their dreams of wealth and happiness in the mythical land of Missitucky. Encounters with the bigotted Senator Rawkins (Tommy Tanner) and the easygoing landowner, Woody Mahony (Brian Snider), complicate the plot. It's up to Og the leprechaun (Bobby Matthews) and Woody's deaf sister Susan (Angie Schmidt) to straighten things out.

Mrs. Betty Hennelly and Mr. Jim Tarvin both showed enthusiastic dedication in their direction of the musical. Eric Francis pitched in his theatrical talents as student director. The choreography and dance instruction were donated by Mrs. Jean Ann Morris, and the sound, lighting, and colorful set were overseen by Mr. Jim Morgan and the stage crew.

FINIAN'S RAINBOW

Don't make a scene! Mr. Tarvin and Mrs. Hennelly make direction plans for the play.

The Eyes Have It

You Can't Hide From Us. We know what you've done. (See page 156 for the truth).

"You did what? . . . I don't care, write your theorems five times each." Mrs. Martine assigns another healthy writing assignment to Jerry Jones.

"How many times have I told you never to disturb me when I'm not doing any thing," Mr Edge

EDITORIAL COMMENTS

The 85-86 yearbook staff takes pride in presenting its brain-child to the school. Pain, joy, dedication, and frustration all played a role in its formation, as the end result of pure pride Manifests. We hope this book not only recreated the people and events of the year, but also portrayed a slice of the feelings and emotions that were a part of the school. Although perfection lies beyond grasp, we think the time and effort spent fulfilled our goal of annual improvement.

So in spite of disappearing copy sheets, unexpected complications and distractions, hunger pains, ever-present proofs, last minute pictures, 4AM Friday night deadlines, and an untimely February snow, we present this yearbook. It's all yours, and it's

ALL TIED UP!

Catholic High School for Boys. Richard DeSpain's magnificent representation of the alma mater

After school activities. Editors Brian Snider and Marcus McAllister demonstrate the yearbook staff's dedication on yet another Friday afternoon.

Serving Up Motherly Love

"All Is Well In The Chow Line"

The Senior Class of '86 happily dedicates this yearbook to Mrs. Kathryn Butler. Of course, we don't really call her that. She has been known to us and to thousands of students before us simply as "Ma" Butler. In our Catholic High family we have experienced teachers who are like aunts and uncles; we have young teachers who are like brothers and sisters. We have two Fathers and one Brother, but we have only one Ma, whom we love in a special way. After 22 years of service, her booming voice, ringing out over the noise of the cafeteria, gives us a feeling of security... we know our Ma is nearby and all is well in the chow line.

Even though her meals surpass those of any other school cafeteria in the state, we still claim the right to gripe about them and to use Ma as a target in skits.

Because she is a genuine Ma, though, she understands and takes it all in stride, but when we mess up her cafeteria, her wrath is like no other. However, behind that facade beats a heart bigger than her voice and shines a love for us that shows in the pride she takes in Catholic High students.

Ma Butler may think she has only two sons, Woody Jr. and Mike, both alumni, but she really has thousands of sons all the Catholic High boys throughout the years. All 187 seniors are glad to join those in their fondest memories of their alma mater, and who realize how much less Catholic High would be without her.

Thanks, Ma, and goodbye!

A little bit of this, a lot of that... Ma Butler whips up yet another scrumptious meal for the ravenously hungry growing boys of Catholic High.

Activism on campus. Anti apartheid sentiments show as Mark Francis, Ethan Schock, and Matthew Dishongh display their concern over South Africa.

Happy Thanksgiving. Michael Pierpaoli, Steve Glenn, Michael Parker, Matt Hartnedy, Derek Hardberger, Jay Van Dover, and Andy Ward demonstrate family spirit by presenting Roman Pilichowski with a bicycle and money donated from students.

Friendly advice. Martin Finley gives Jimmy Young a few pointers on diving to help the swimming team keep up the tradition of champions

"I have a dream!" Marvin Boyd relates the life and times of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., during a special assembly held on January 20.

In Retrospect

Memories. The human mind is fantastic, able to store vast quantities of information. Clicking neurons continually shove data into a vague region called memory, whether the information comes from an ordinary occurrence or singular experience.

Progressing nonchalantly through high school, we become increasingly aware of this amazing ability. We recreate and relive events of the past, sometimes without even realizing it. "Hey, remember the time ..." becomes a vital prefix to more and more conversations. Memory dictates many of our thoughts and actions.

Who could forget names like Fr. De-bosier, the McKay brothers, Mr. Bersey, and Mrs. Gowen? Events such as the chemical fire, the razing of the old Mount building, school-hopping tornadoes, the academic decathlon, and the installation of the new bleachers stand as reminders of life at Catholic High.

Jaguar dreams. Freshman Ward Gardner eagerly anticipates driving his mom's Jaguar, receiving his senior ring, and reading his senior yearbook. Too bad it will be a long time before he gets everything all tied up!
